Preliminary surveys of the properties were made by Ernest Meyer of this place.

Mrs. Frank Paxton, accompanied by her brother Tom Mukley, passed through recently on her way to the XL ranch at the upper end of Abert lake.

We are very glad to learn that Mrs. Wm. Rousch, who went to San Francisco to undergo an operation, had stood the ordeal very well, and that she was progressing very favorably.

The Norin sheep are now at the shearing corrals across the valley.

To Locate in Klamath

Chas. H. Combs was over in Klamath during the past week and during his stay found some land subject to entry upon which he has filed a homestead. The land is located near Naylor and is quite valuable.

Mr. Combs made the trip by auto and is very enthusiastic over the condition of the Lake county portion of the road. In Klamath but a small portion of the road is in good shape, while in Lake all of the road is in first-class shape and the run from Bly to Lakeview was made in three hours.

Wedded at Alturas

Word has been received here of the marriage of Robert Wier, who for some time has been employed by the Davis Creek Orchards Co., at Davis Creek, to Miss Fannie Tonningsen, a former Lakeview girl. Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Chrisman, Bob Robinett and J. C. Lewis accompanied H. Adams to Summer Lake Friday for the purpose of sizing up the land with a view of taking desert claims.

Dick Sherlock had a runaway near town the last of the week that broke the buggy up pretty badly. Miss Jennie Anderson of Lake visited friends in town the first of the week enroute to Lakeview where she will take the county teachers' examination and also attend the Baptists' convention which is in session there this week. United States government, when, on the payment of the balance the state would make a deed to its assignee in lieu of the swamp land certificate.

Under the law "Swamp Angel" Owen filed a list covering 100,000 acres of land in Lake county, all supposed to be swamp land, but did not make a tender of the 20 cents an acre to accompany the list. Following this the next legislature passed a new law providing that no single applicant could file for more than 320 acres. Following the passage of this law Owen made a tender of his money and was awarded 60,000 acres through the swamp land certificates under the prior law.

Some of these lands eventually fell into the hands of the Warner Valley Stock company and some into the hands of settlers. Some of the settlers made application to the United States government for a patent, but the government notified them that the lands were covered by the state swamp land claims and could not be patented to the settlers.

George E. Chamberlain, who was governor at that time protested to the government, stating that the lands could not come under the swamp land claims as they were in many cases not swamp lands. He asserted that the state authorities originally had no right to dispose of them, because they did so after the new law had gone into effect requiring that no single applicant could receive more than 320 acres.

The state brought suit against the Warner Valley Stock company, contending that the deeds were secured through fraud and that former state officers had exceeded their authority. The state won in the state courts in the Warner Valley case and the suit has been appealed to the Supreme Court.

Before the 1911 session of the legislature the State Land Board reached a compromise with the Warner Valley Stock company in which the company was to deed back to the state about 4000 acres and to the settlers about 2000 acres. The company owns altogether approximately 25,000 acres, which are in litigation. This compromise met resistance in the Senate and West ordered the bill killed as it was an administrative measure.

Now the balance of the 600,000 acres originally secured by Owen will partially fall under the suit which West proposes to bring as soon as possible through the Attorney-General.
