Will Winter Here
H. H. Riddels, superintendent of the Maney Bros. Construction Co., has completed his work for the N. C. O. and will winter his stock at New Pine Creek. He has stored his outfit in the wool warehouse, and will be ready for any work that may turn up in the spring.
It is likely that work on the Cowhead Lake project in Surprise Valley will be let at an early date, in which event Mr. Riddels would be able to submit a much lower bid than if he were compelled to ship an outfit in. It is also probable that the construction of the Cottonwood dam of the local irrigation project will be let during the coming year, in which event there will be employment for a large number of men and teams next summer.

Beggars and Bandages.
It was a case in which first aid to the injured was imperative, but no one present knew how to extend the aid. Presently a bandaged beggar who had been sitting on the curb east of his pretense of helplessness. Out of linen strips provided by the women in the crowd he fashioned bandages and applied them skillfully.
"Where did you acquire all that skill in nursing?" a bystander asked.
"It is one of the first things the men of our profession learn," was the candid response. "Half our success depends upon arrangement of bandages that makes us look as if we had been half killed. No doctor can be depended on to fix us up, so we have to do our own bandaging. Every successful man in the business practices on himself and the other fellows until he can turn out a first class job."—New York Sun.

"On the days when I reflect how little I really amount to I cheer myself by remembering how much I expect of others."
