Begins Our ANNUAL INVENTORY-CLEARANCE SALE

This sale should mean much to you. It is a money-saving event of the extraordinary kind, and it can only last as long as the lines offered remain in stock. It is the policy of this store to make a complete clearance at the end of each season. New goods must necessarily find a place. This, in itself, is sufficient to warrant that whatever we offer now is cut so low in price that quick selling will be the result. To be assured of the best selections, you should attend this bargain festival at the earliest possible date. Some lines in our present stock will never be duplicated, and the very low prices quoted below will undoubtedly close them out at once.

ERNEST BROWN KILLED

his brother with gun in hand at a "ready," hesitated a moment, the officer at his heels, told Bert to put the gun down. "Stand aside!" commanded Bert, and as he did so, discovering the officer the murderer pulled the trigger, but the first shot went wild. He fired a second time, shooting him in the right breast, near the armpit. "Oh!" exclaimed the wounded officer, who had turned upon his heels and started towards the front gate. After he had gone nearly halfway between the house and the gate he fell in the snow and expired. The fatal bullet had gone through his right lung and severed an artery.

A dark and crimson stream of blood gushed from his nostrils and mouth and running down each cheek gave the face of the dead official a most startling and tragic appearance by the glimmering rays of lanterns held over it.

"I thought I was going to get it next," said the boy to the writer, and he fled through a door into another room and out of the house, but the insane wretch stooped down, placing the gun's breech on the floor and the muzzle to his forehead fired, sending a tall through the top of his head. He fell backward to the floor dying instantly.

Such are the facts gathered by interviews with Mrs. Taylor, the widow, and Delmar Taylor, of the homicide and suicide, and The Examiner is satisfied that they embrace substantially the whole truth.

The Taylors came to Lakeview early in November from the Malheur country, where they were living on a homestead, the intention being to go to Coos Bay as soon as they could because their eldest child, a boy of three, was afflicted with convulsions or fits, and they wished to get medical aid for the little one. Taylor was a man 27 years of age, with two children, his wife having a boy of six by a former husband. He was subject to fits of high temper, and during some of these had several times threatened to kill his wife, and this condition of mind seemed to grow more frequent and severe of late. That he was a moral pervert, with insane tendencies, is the most reasonable conclusion one can reach judging from the circumstances and surroundings. There seems to have been no ground whatever for jealousy towards his wife, any more than there was for his killing the officer against whom he could not possibly had a grudge, for he had never more than seen the man before.

He had an excellent team, and he and his brother had for some time been engaged in tearing down a barn for Chas. Umbach.

His widow testified before the coroner's jury that Taylor had been convicted of horse stealing in Idaho, some years ago, before they were married.

Ernest M. Brown, the city marshal, who fell a victim to the perverted and homicidal mind of that man, Bertrand Taylor, had been a resident of this city for the past twenty years, and had the good opinion of everybody. He was born at Atlantic, Iowa, September 2, 1858, and was, therefore, nearly 53 years of age. On the 8th of December, 1895, he married Miss Arnetta Smith, who survives him, and was the father of one child, a son, who is now about six years of age. He was a member of the Foresters and of the A. O. U. W. The funeral took place from the M. E. Church Tuesday afternoon, Rev. M. T. Wire conducting the services, which were largely attended.

That the usual quiet of the Sabbath evening should be disturbed by an event so horrible as that of this murder and suicide, was something the city had never experienced before in all of its history, and when the import of the matter became public crowds of people gathered on the streets to learn the particulars and discuss the situation; and it is easy to conceive that had not the author of the death of the chief officer of the city taken his own life there would have been serious business on hand before that crowd could have been quieted. So that, bad as the matter is, it is comforting to reflect that it might have been worse.

The coroner's jury empaneled to investigate the cause of death reported as follows:

We, the persons empaneled to investigate the cause of the death of Ernest M. Brown, marshal of the town of Lakeview, Ore., aged 52 years, 3 months and 29 days, find by evidence that the said Ernest M. Brown came to his death by a gunshot wound from the hands of Bertrand Lewis Taylor, on the night of Dec. 31, 1911, at the hour of 6 P. M. (signed) R. F. Paxton, foreman, John Simmons, John Arzner, R. A. Hawkins, D. H. Bemis, and S. J. McKee.

The verdict in the case of Taylor did not differ from the above except that it stated "inflicted by his own hand."

One fact is apparent to the passerby on the business portion of Water street: Either the sidewalks should be raised or the grade of the street should be lowered. Should a Chinook come and the foot or more of snow now covering the ground go off with a rush, some of the business houses along that thoroughfare would be compelled to enjoy, or endure, the luxury of a flood, and some goods be treated to a bath that might not add to the value thereof.

CITY DADS IN SESSION

he would not be averse to accepting the place if the council thought best. He said the only reason he had for preferring the place was that he had a family, and on that account would like to be at home nights. The day work was far more taxing on the time and attention than the night work, which was little more than walking the streets. He was entirely willing to leave the matter to the council.

The mayor was given authority to make a temporary appointment and also to appoint two extra men to serve during Railroad Day.

Upon motion the following memorial resolution was passed, ordered placed upon the record and an enrolled copy ordered to be presented to the widow of the late town marshal, Ernest M. Brown:

"Only the actions of the Just Smell sweet and blossom in the dust."

Whereas: In the course of Human Events, an All-wise Providence has willed that City Marshal Ernest M. Brown, should be taken from our midst, while in the discharge of his sacred duty, as an efficient and capable officer of the law by the hand of an assassin; therefore

Be it Resolved: That We, the Mayor and Common Council of the Town of Lakeview, in regular session convened; representing the feeling of her citizens, and the views of the people at large; and appreciating the many sterling qualities of the deceased, as shown in the places of public trust to which he had been assigned; his loyalty and faithfulness as an upright citizen; as a loving husband and as a kind, considerate father; and feeling that every heart-throb, every sympathetic thought, every ascending prayer, in the community that was enriched by knowing him, is with the Widow and Fatherless Child, at this sad time: do hereby tender, our heartfelt and sincerest sympathy to the Bereaved Family, in this, their hour of sorrow.

Be it further Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Public Records of the Town of Lakeview; that one be given to each of the local newspapers for publication; and that one be suitably embossed and framed, and that it be presented to Mrs. Arnetta Brown, Widow of the Deceased.

E. E. Rinehart, Mayor.
E. F. Chenev,
E. H. Smith,
J. F. Mavfield,
F. M. Duke,
Councilman.

Wm. Wallace, Recorder.
After adopting a motion looking to a proper care and the hospitable treatment of the guests of the town on Railroad Day, the council adjourned till the next regular meeting.

L. Alva Lewis, assistant game warden, was in Lakeview a few days ago on his way home to Klamath Falls. Mr. Lewis had just returned from a trip to Harney county, where he had been making arrangements for better protection of mule deer during the winter months. It is likely that there will be a game warden stationed in the Fort Rock and Christmas Lake country in the near future, his duty being to afford protection to the deer that winter in that section.

MEXICAN REBEL LAYS DOWN ARMS

Linares, Mexico, Dec. 30.—Defeated and stripped of his former pride, General Bernardo Reyes, Mexico's onetime great military leader and more recently leader of a revolt that threatened to tear the country from border to border, surrendered here today. He later was given his liberty on his word that he would not leave the city.

General Reyes surrendered officially to General Trevino, a personal enemy for years.

Riding alone into Linares today, the gray haired rebel gave himself up to Lieutenant Placido Rodriguez, commander of 25 rurales, the sole military guard here. Permission was obtained to telegraph a formal capitulation to General Trevino, commander of the third military zone at Monterey. He frankly admitted his dream of another successful revolution having come to an end and placed himself at Trevino's disposal.

"I called upon the army, I called upon the people," said the broken general, "and no one responded. This attitude I regard as a protest and I am resolved not to continue this war against the government. I place myself at your disposition."

Reyes asked no guarantee for himself, but pleaded for mercy for the little group of men who have followed him in his wanderings to and fro throughout a large area in this state and in the state of Tamaulipas. He requested consideration for them. They are still fugitives and will be hunted down by Trevino's men unless they, too, surrender voluntarily.

To Reyes' message General Trevino replied that General Reyes would be kept under surveillance in Linares pending instructions from the central government. That he will be taken to the capital to answer for his offense is considered by Reyes as the natural result of his surrender.

Reyes' attempt to save his followers was answered by Trevino, who telegraphed to Reyes that he had no authority to relax his campaign.

The climax to Reyes' unsuccessful attempts to recruit an army came yesterday and resulted in his decision to surrender.

CITY NEEDS IN EVIDENCE

labor, not only on the part of the city authorities, but by the determined effort of every man and woman who takes pride in promoting the city's weal. When everybody helps great things are easily accomplished, but when a few hold back those who favor the good work find the pulling much harder.

With a Civic Improvement league formed and at work among the women of the city, a good leverage has been created for the betterment of city conditions. A Commercial Club organized and at work on the part of the live men of the town, is a still stronger element looking to the same end. With these for leaders the prospect is certainly bright for doing great things for Lakeview this year of grace, 1912.
