 ers, a pair of tow legs and the last remains of a strong, able bodied pipe, boarded the train at Davis Creek to wheeze into my ear the anecdotes that he has lived in this vicinity ever since Goose Lake was a small frog pond.
 And onward and joyward rolled Hiram and his gladness.
 Johnny-On-The-Spot Jones boarded the train at Alturas. I shall always believe that Jones needs a little tinkering in the region of his noodle.
 He persisted in poking his finger toward my complexion while endeavoring to explain the similarity between a petrified pee wee and a Native Son. I felt so sorry for him before he finally quit that I honestly believe there is something the matter with both of us yet. I am not a bud man and never owned a grave yard in my life. But I do most strenuously object to a man who is only about half my size, shrieking in my ear a slogan to the effect that I am a no good old euss. And so Jones went back to his widowed wives and orphan children in Salt Lake to persuade them to help him regret it.
 At a way station I asked a man with several holes in his blue denim and the dust of ages on his hat, where he was pumping water from. He elevated his right fore finger to his ear and shook his head. I understood immediately what had happened. One sad time in the drear dead past, in an evil hour and the rear end of a dream factory he had listened to the analytical diagnosis of the difference existing between 1-37 of porphyry dyke and 99 100 of 1-1 of a good time by Fraction Jack. And from that day he was deaf and dumb, and can only see large objects where the sun shines bright.
 On and on over golden sands the cactus that don't like to quit at Doyle where the Western Pacific performs all the unfinished business of the N. C. O.
 And then that ride over the Sierras where delight eternally bumps up against amazement and Where Oily Tongued Olmeyer would stutter when he began to tell it. And then down the Feather River by moonlight where reminiscence is weaving itself with picturesque beauty in the brain like cobwebs in the chimney corner.
 Beautiful realms where "For Pins and Feathers" entice the pilgrim for pastime and the seekers for shekels alike.
 I wonder now Old Lomax could do it. He is now certainly the king bee in the hive of American Railroad Scenery. I have arranged to place upon his head a crown of good old yellow glittering gold from Krokod Kreek Canyon.
 And the Sacramento valley with oranges as big as a crocodile and flowers the fragrance of which tickles the nostrils of the Fiji Islanders.
 It was a great trip which I shall never forget if I live to be as old as the cheese in Lonzeaway's restaurant. It touched me in 17 or 18 very tender spots. It was more touchingly touching than the sad see saw of a Katy-Did, she did, where the sweet magnolias bloom, and it was more intensely entertaining than listening to very latest from Buck Horn Basin by Pompadour Papke.
 I have not had so much fun at any one time since my step father died. And the only thing that made me cry was the remembrance that Old Quartz could not participate in my hilarity.

 The Alturas property is open for inspection and a portion of the ground is open for lease on which can be shown good prospects on reasonable terms to the right parties.
 J. P. Branley, manager of the Seven Lakes Mining and Milling company, reports a $16 assay from ore taken from four feet in width in the bottom of a 12-foot shaft on the Last Chance claim.
 E. N. Strong, district manager of the Oregon Life Insurance company of Portland and Lewis Wyld of Lakeview, resident agent for the same company, were here Friday soliciting business for the company.
 A. Sorrick has his restaurant open for business at the Branley townsite on the Seven Lake property. He has five regular boarders and is setting up a first-class meal for fifty cents.
 Wm. Mack and Oscar Stewart are doing discovery work on the Mollie Mack and Lucky Bill claims on Cottonwood creek. These claims are good looking and promising properties.
 The committee soliciting subscriptions to water works stocks had $2800 raised yesterday. As only $4000 has to be raised here this looks as though the proposition would go through all right.
 Charley Larkin while trenching on his claim at the head of Cottonwood creek struck ore that assayed $64. Charley was surprised at the result of the assay and hurried back to the claim to push development work.
