HIRAM HIGRADE ON THE WARPATH

Gets Hunch Old Quartz Frolics With Serpents, Ravens, Hobgoblins, Etc.

(High Grade News)

These are some of the days that are filled with rampant and rancidness.

Several yards of bran, new crepe is preparing to flop in the festive breeze from the latch string of the Krumbler sanctum. There is liable to be many varieties of lamentation in Krokod Kreek Canyon toberly soon.

Event has become straggle from chasing episode, and turmoil has fondled the suburn tresses of hilarity with a double jack.

The heartbroken boo hoo of the bull grouse in the jungle has joined the jar of dynamite on the summit, and the burro's loud hoanna on the heather.

There has been warwhoop, wail, and many sorts of weep in Krokod Kreek only a little while ago, and also quite recently, and my iron gray ringlets have been thus lured to a certain spot only about three fourths of an inch from the grave.

Somewhere near the geometrical diameter of last Tuesday night, when good men waked the weikin with their snore, I was handed a handy hunch by Hunchy Hunchback, to the effect that Old Quartz has been untrue to me, and I there, and in the identical center of that very spot, made up my mind to quit him.

The hunch handed me by Hunchy immediately proceeded to make me feel, and otherwise absolutely believe that there was something exceedingly de ad under the house.

Hunchy poured said anecdote into the wrinkles and weather beaten fuzzi of my Northwest auditory nerve. It related to your Uncle Hiram a tale vastly more pathetic than that of "The Phantom Dromedaires, The Mirage Devourers The Desert: A tale of Sand and Silence."

It was a hunch that came within one millionth part of a centimeter of costing me my life. It thundered its tradition of combined mental decrepitude, mural delinquency and physical degeneracy in my lone, left lobe, that made me earnestly desire to seek some quiet secerated cranny where only the crickets chirp and the June bug whets his bill on the pumpkin vine. I would rather be deceased than to suffer again the ethereal thrill of that dire moment.

The hunch duly advised me that during my absence Old Quartz had jiggered, flim flammed, skinned, fleeced peeled and otherwise removed the pelt from my person. That he had secretly, and likewise clandestine; also feloniously and sacrilegiously tinkered with, fumbled over, peered at, grabbed, purloined and appropriated certain and divers pieces of silver, there and then, and until that identical moment being and constituting the kopeks in and also of our common exchequer. That with said visible means of support he repaired immediately, and with all due alertness and energy to the rear portal of Pick Handle Pete's regret factory, and that with some hard, heavy and bandy weapons of warfare he did there and then in that one said spot, place or locality, on said back door deposit with great strength of body and fearlessness of spirit one long and two short thunder bolts, which said signal is used by Old Quartz as his grand hailing sign of distress when the dimensions of his throat overpowers the magnitude of his idea of what shall a men do to be saved.

That Old Quartz willfully placed his person upon the inside of said Pick Handle Pete's parlor of vain regrets, and immediately thereafter to place his said same person upon the outside of 49 or 50 jolts of that rare old commodity that maketh not afraid, at the expense of the co-partnership, without my knowledge or consent while I was absent and also elsewhere. That he suddenly realized that John D. Rockefeller was his step parent and that in a very short space of recorded time he would convey said John to the south east corner of a cemetery for the sole purpose of planting all that will then be mortal of said bald headed, stomachless and hard hearted step father in a deep and convenient hole that is to be excavated for that purpose only. That he was then and there a millionaire, magnate or other bull guy; that his place of earthy abode was upon a corner lot at the intersection of Jubilee Avenue and Easy Street within the city of Krokod Kreek, county and state aforesaid; that while thus realizing the get rich quick hope of a ing, meander ng and eventual career, the beneficiaries of his opulence suddenly and mysteriously discovered that Old Quartz was unable to say as to whether a very low high ball or an exceedingly high low ball would produce the most instantaneous shekels of this great and glorious American Republic.

Deponent further and likewise avers that Old Quartz became unwell, and that he was removed to his habitation on a stretcher, and located upon his couch of repose, by Rason Redmont, Chipper Charlie Mixer Marden, and others, there and then assembled in the said crocodile and hobgoblin nursery of said Pick Handle Pete, to partake of said essence of barb wire and tarantula with Old Quartz, at the expense of our sad common exchequer.

Affiant further states that while reclining upon said mattress of rest Old Quartz suddenly became exceedingly and violently bug house, and battled with sea serpents within his foot wear and the ravens that were perched upon all of his bed posts, his hat peg the nail keg, the muck shovel and other household utensils.

Furthermore that while the coroner's jury was giving Pick Handle Pete a verdict of "Murder in The First Degree." Old Quartz suddenly and mysteriously returned to consciousness, and in a focal, ribald and uncouth manner requested the coroner and his jury, the mourners and all four of the pallbearers to "have another one with him," at the expense of our said common exchequer.

When this hunch had all been handed to your Uncle Hiram I at once and also immediately proceeded to ascertain the then precise and exact whereabouts of Old Quartz. The blood of my ancestors called from the cemeteries of 17 states and territories for vengeance. There was something exceedingly red in both of my pale blue eyes. I yearned for a mess of grind sones and pig iron for my evening repast, with a dish of well done monkey wrenches for desert. I longed to hang all of the hide of Old Quartz upon our gate post. I desired intensely to locate his mortal one hundredth fraction of a not much of anything on the other side of the isasper walls.

I finally located him on Jubilee Avenue conversing with himself in eight or nine different languages. His costume had almost entirely disappeared from his person, and his cleanliness had gone to join the dear departed. His noodle was ready for the repair shop; and his breath was something upon which one could ride with perfect safety. I took him gently by his right phalanges, led him down to Cockroach Connie's "Flower Garden" gave him a dollar and six bits, with my latest installment of good fatherly advice, poured several more Irish dewdrops into his funnel and then your Uncle Hiram danced "Turkey in The Straw," on the basement of Old Quartz, and fanned him to sleep with a handspike.

It is an awful thing to monkey with that which belongs to another, or to tinker with the kopeks of a common exchequer.

THE COOK UP AT ANDERSON LAKE

(High Grade News)

You may sing of your heroes
And sing of your wars
You may sing of your oceans
And mountains and stars
For the present such
Fanciful themes I forsake
To sing of the cook
Up at Anderson lake.

This man's an inventor
As well as a cook
And is bound to be famous
By nook or by crook
Such queer combinations
He'd brew and he'd bake
We called him the "Chef"
Up at Anderson lake.

The work was all right
And the bunk house was nice
Except for some insects
Much smaller than mice
But the thought of the food
Makes my belly still ache
While Packard was cook
Up at Anderson lake.

He made fourteen decorations
Of coffees and teas
He could decorate hell
With a coat of split peas
And the way he stewed fruit
Was a proof that no "fake"
Was cooking the grub
Up at Anderson lake.

We had rice boiled in vinegar
Mush stewed in fat
And soups that were flavored
With heaven knows what
We had adamant biscuit
And sole leather cake
But the puddings were marvels
At Anderson lake.

He boiled them, he fried them
And roasted them too
He served them as bash
And he served them as stew
One ounce and a half
Kept you ten nights awake
Should you dare to eat that much
At Anderson lake.

"Welsh rabbit" with vinegar
Mustard and oil
He would serve while he scratched
At a pipple or boil
And the wonderful smells
He together could rake
Made you think of a bone mill
At Anderson lake.

His actions were filthy
His manners were rude
His stories were wonderful
Just like the food
The shade of Munchausen
In torment must quake
When he meets his great rival
From Anderson lake.

When I go up to heaven
I'll interview Pete
And show him some stuff
That decides
A new cook he must take
I'll recommend Packard
From Anderson lake.

The camp equipment of the company is now completed, and the men have comfortable quarters.
