DECLARE WAR ON COLDS.

A crusade of education which aims "that common colds may become uncommon within the next generation" has been begun by prominent New York physicians. Here is a list of "don'ts" which the doctors say will prevent the annual visitation of the cold:

"Don't sit in a draughty car." "Don't sleep in hot rooms." "Don't avoid the fresh air." "Don't stuff yourself at meal time. Overeating reduces your resistance." To which we would add—when you take a cold get rid of it as quickly as possible. To accomplish that you will find Chamberlain's Cough Remedy most excellent. Sold by all dealers.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE EFFECTIVE SOON

Governor West said that when the time comes to issue the proclamation declaring woman's suffrage in effect in Oregon he will go to Portland to the home of Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway, requesting her to write out the proclamation in her own hand writing and he will sign it as a Salem dispatch to the Oregonian.

The proclamation will thus become a part of the archives of the state in the handwriting of the pioneer woman suffrage leader of the state.

The law requires that within 30 days after the election, or as soon before as possible, the Secretary of State shall canvass the votes on the measures in the presence of the Governor and the executive shall forthwith issue proclamations declaring such laws in effect.

The Governor said that he intends to hurry the issuance of the proclamation as much as possible that the women may have an opportunity to vote on what city elections are held in the state this year.

President's Proclamation

President Taft last Thursday issued a proclamation setting aside November 28 as Thanksgiving day.

The proclamation follows: "By the president of the United States, a proclamation: "A God-fearing nation like ours owes to its inborn and sincere sense of moral duty to testify its devout gratitude to the Almightier for the countless benefits it has enjoyed. For many years it has been customary at the close of the year for the national executive to urge upon his fellow-countrymen to offer praise and thanks to God for the many blessings vouchsafed to them in the past and to unite in earnest supplication for their continuance.

"The year now drawing to a close has been notably favorable to our fortunate land. At peace with and without, free from the perturbations and calamities that have afflicted other peoples, rich in harvests so abundant and industries so productive that the overflow of our prosperity has advantaged the whole world, strong in the steadfast possession of self government bequeathed to us by the wisdom of our fathers, and firm in the resolve to transmit them unimpaired, but rather improved by good use, to our children and our children's children for all time to come, the people of this country have abounding cause for contented gratitude.

"WHEREFORE, I, William Howard Taft, president of the United States of America, in pursuance of long established usage and in response to the wish of the American people, invite my countrymen, wheresoever they may sojourn, to join, on Thursday, the twenty-eighth day of this month of November, in appropriate ascription of praise and thanks to God for the good gifts that have been our portion and in humble prayer that His great mercies toward us may endure."

An Admission

"Marie," said Mr. Valesbury to his wife. "Yes, John."

"I have something on my mind that I must tell you before I can ever be happy."

"I shall be glad to hear anything you have to say, John."

"It is hard to tell you, but I can't hide the truth any longer, Marie. I married you under false pretenses."

"You did!" "Do you remember what it was that brought us together?"

"Can I ever forget it, John? We were at the bathing beach, I was drowning, and you saved me after I had given myself up for lost."

"And afterwards, in gratitude, you married me."

"Yes, I felt that I owed my life to you."

"Marie, I deluded you about that rescue business. Where you believed yourself drowning the water was only waist deep. You were in no danger."

"I knew that, John," she answered. "I had one foot on the bottom all the time."

TREATMENT FOR CUTS ON HORSES.

When a horse gets a barb wire cut do not apply axle grease or any greasy substance, writes A. S. Alexander, M. D. C., in the Farm Journal. Wash the part clean. Clip off the hair around the wound and then wash again to get rid of hair and any foreign substance that may have lodged in the wound. If necessary to remove sand, earth or cinders from a wound, due to a fall, for instance, use clean cotton batting or absorbent cotton and not a sponge. A sponge becomes dirty and readily infects a wound. Each day use fresh absorbent cotton to do any cleansing necessary in treating a wound or sore. When the wound has been cleansed do not put in stitches (sutures) if the wound is deep or ragged or in a place that will not be perfectly at rest when the horse is standing, walking, lying down or rising. If there is no use in stitching a wound in front of the hock joint or on the thin skin in the bend of any joint or in the skin and muscles of the rear parts which are strained and used in rising. Often a horse suffers a wide open wound of the skin and the muscles at the side of the tail inflicted by the kick of the horse in the next stall. This wound rarely can be sutured successfully. The stitches tear out when the horse gets up, and the wound is made worse than before. Tie up the animal so that he cannot lie down when such a wound has to be treated. It may then be sutured if the muscles are not deeply cut. The wound then should be wetted often with white lotion, or a dry dusting powder may be applied twice a day.

The Percheron was first introduced into America about fifty years ago, and it seems to be growing in favor. The breed is known for its characteristic gray color. However, black is coming into favor as a color, and the bay, roan and chestnuts may be found. The Percheron is a massive, heavily muscled animal, from 16 to 17 1/2 hands high, weighing usually from 1,600 to 2,500 pounds. The Percheron has good action, although it is said that the stride is not so showy nor quite so active as that of the Clydesdale.

A cheap dusting powder is made by mixing together equal parts of slaked lime, sulphur and charcoal. Run this through a flour sifter to make it fine. This is a good powder to dust on large sores. In dry time add a dram of iodine per ounce and the flies will be kept off. A more expensive dusting powder for use on sores and wounds may be made by mixing together one dram of iodine and seven drams of boracic acid. This is good powder to use on a wound of the hoof head (coronet). Such wounds should not be stitched. Cleanse them, clip away the hair, dust freely with the powder, then cover with cotton batting or absorbent cotton and bandage snugly. Renew the dressing once daily. If there is a big wound and a flap of skin a cilious bunch is likely to remain when the wound has healed. This can be largely prevented by placing a flat wad of oakum over the first turn or two of the bandage immediately upon the flap and wound and then bandaging tightly to cause pressure upon the part.

When a horse gets a nail prick, and such wounds are very common and serious, always have the wound cut down upon to give vent to any blood, serum or pus which should come away. Even the slight nail wound should be so handled. After the cutting saturate the wound with a one five-hundredths solution of corrosive sublimate and then cover with the last prescribed dusting powder, absorbent cotton and bandage. Renew the dressing daily. If pus issues from the wound be careful to cut away every part of the under-run horn or sole; then swab with the corrosive sublimate solution and use dusting powder and cotton and bandage once a day. Pouring turpentine in a nail prick does not suffice. The slight wound may be followed by lockjaw. The treatment we have prescribed prevents that disease.
