HOW TO PROTECT TREES FROM PESTS

A correspondent from Sundale, Washington writes the Portland Journal as follows in regard to the protection of fruit trees against pests:

Jackrabbits and cutworms have done considerable damage to orchards in Klickitat county in past years. We have learned, we believe, how to save our trees from both these pests. By painting the trees' with blood the rabbits are kept away. They are herbivorous only and dislike the blood.

Paint your trees from the ground to the forks. Only one and two year old trees, as a rule, are attacked. No doubt this treatment will save the trees from the work of ground squirrels also. The blood can be had from the Union Meat company of Portland, or any slaughter house can furnish it, no doubt. Ten-gallon cases cost me $2.65, delivered.

Cutworms for several years have been doing great damage by climbing the young trees at the time the first buds swell and eating out the tender bud. As soon as the weather gets warm they disappear. For two years past a remedy composed of bran, molasses, sour bear and Paris green has been widely copied, as coming from some experiment station, not in Oregon. It is about as efficient as the old remedy for bedbugs. Catch your bug and tickle it under the chin until it laughs, then shove a spoonful of poison down its throat. I have found three dead worms under a tree, and over 40 live ones. I killed all I put in a can with the mixture, but there was nothing else in the can.

We now use common table oilcloth. A piece 4x6 inches is wrapped around the tree a foot from the ground and pasted under the lap. It is too smooth for the worm to crawl over. Tin works as well, but is very much more expensive, and more difficult to apply, and tends to injure the tree. After the danger is past the oilcloth should be removed.

This remedy will not do the nurserymen any good, for the worms eat the bud or graft close to the ground, and there is no chance to wrap the stock.

POTATO DISEASE BEING STUDIED

That there are at least six well defined potato diseases, some of them causing great losses in Oregon, has been determined by the crop pest investigation at the Oregon Agricultural College. The experts have devoted their attention thus far mainly to a survey to discover the extent and distribution of potato diseases, but it is planned in the future to study each of the six principal diseases in detail with special reference to conditions in Oregon.

Co-operative work is under way to test different varieties of potatoes for disease resistance. The seed for these tests is furnished by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and a small field of the college farm has been planted, both good and bad potatoes being used, for comparison.

The crop pest department of the Oregon Agricultural Experiment Station is making an effort to classify the various fungi causing bark canker of apples and pears. Different ones have been isolated and inoculations made.

Results of recent experimental work on cherry gummosis in which important determinations were made at the Oregon Agricultural College will be given soon in the Oregon Countryman, a farm magazine published by the students.

Forest Areas

Nearly one-third of the total area of Oregon is included in forest reserves, according to figures compiled and made public by the secretary of state's offices. There are 61,188,480 acres in the state, of which 16,023,420 are in forest reserves.

Cascade, 1,097,700 acres; Crater, 1,019,400 acres; Deschutes, 942,020; Fremont, 852,000 acres; Klamath, 9,200 acres; Malheur, 1,262,840 acres; Minam, 448,330 acres; Ochoo, 819,030 acres; Oregon, 1,141,120 acres; Paulina, 1,33,336 acres; Santiam, 710,170 acres; Siakivou, 1,278,930 acres; Siuslaw, 821,000 acres; Umatilla, 566,920 acres; Umpqua, 1,195,670 acres; Wenshan, 472,000 acres; Whitman, 949,230 acres.

CONVICTS IN ROAD BUILDING

Why Their Use Is Becoming Nation Wide In Scope.

BOTH SIDES ARE BENEFITED

The Men Themselves Take Pride In Their Work and Are Kept Strong and Well—The State Has Less Expense and Better Highways.

The use of convicts on the public roads has passed through the period of hysterical wrangle into a period of actually successful accomplishment and almost universal acceptance. Articles galore have been written, pictures of the convict road gang intrude themselves upon the public from the pages of our current journals, while the "movies" take our children in among the convicts at work upon the roads—all teach us that under a zebra-like exterior there is the human being—the same as ourselves.

What lies behind the demand for the work of convicts upon the roads? Is it the demand for cheap labor on the part of the road builders? Is it the demand for cheap road construction on the part of property owners? Is it the demand for a new type of convict labor in an unorganized industry free from competition? Is it the desire of some prison warden or state official to get public acclaim? While human nature is as it is there is likelihood that motives such as these will lead some men to seek to exploit the convict. Still it is the hope of the new school of penologists that these anti-social instincts will be curbed by law and social usage and by the severe hand of the penal system itself. Exploitation from whatever source must not be the reason for the development of the work of convicts upon the roads.

The underlying motive in convict road building must be to secure the greatest efficiency for the state out of its possession. The convict is the property of the state or of its subdivisions. The working of the convict upon the roads brings together two elements similar in their possession, thereby eliminating many elements of waste in their joint operation.

Road labor is fairly well paid, is of a roving type picked up in the neighborhood and possesses the ruggedness and endurance which mean hardihood, yet a healthy vigor and manhood which often attract the growing spirit of youth when an outlet is sought for the surplus energies and wayward tendencies. The road camp is democracy. The man's a man for a' that. Give and take, respect the cook, keep clean if possible, and devil take the hindmost. Many convicts need just such experience. It would be foolish to put others on the road gang. The men must be selected because of their need of just such experience. The victim of wanderlust had better be kept within the prison walls.

Federal aid will encourage state road building. Our national roads will be but few, our state roads should be many. The state road superintendent should work together with the state prison authorities on the convict situation and both the county road work and the county convict should be under their supervision. The picture I have drawn as convicts' camps at their best must not be taken for a description of the calcareous which is found in some of the states. It is fallacious to waste the possibilities of convict labor as they are being wasted in some places.

Severity of discipline in things penal has been confused with slackness of business management, while the application of scientific methods based upon the psychology of the individual has been confused with sentimental emotionalism. Improve the convict camp, place it on the right basis, and the result will be that the magistrates will commit many men whom they today release for fear of condemning them to cruel and unusual punishment. How much better to put these guilty men on the roads gangs than to send out police to gather the crapsshooters from the byways and hedges. The new industrial penology claims to be humane, but because it is humane it is a hard headed materialistic proposition whereby more guilty men will be punished and their punishment profit them and the state more.—E. Stagg Whitin in Southern Good Roads.

EXTENSION WORK BILL SUPPORTED

Correspondence News of Interest Pertaining to The State

Special to the Examiner.—As Senate Bill 72, providing for demonstration work throughout the state under the direction of the Agricultural College, is understood, it is gaining support in all quarters. It is distinctly a measure for the benefit of the man on the soil and will be of great advantage to the rural communities of Oregon. Senator Thompson, of Crook, Klamath and Lake counties declares this bill is the most important piece of legislation before the present session or that can come before it. He declares that while it is of vast importance to the section of the state he represents, it is of equal benefit to all parts of Oregon.

According to the report of the Oregon Conservation Commission, this state has 545,000,000 feet of standing timber, or one fifth that of the United States. Unused waterpower in Oregon streams is capable of producing 3,300,000 electric horsepower. 2,000,000 acres of this state can be irrigated at a cost of $30 to $50 per acre, making the land worth, when irrigated, from $100 to $500 per acre. The report outlines in a comprehensive way Oregon's many dormant resources.

Because Oregon was admitted to the Union on February 14, 1859, a suggestion has been made that this be called the "Valentine State." It is claimed that this pseudonym has advantages over the misleading "Webfoot" and "Beaver" which have done duty for so many years.

Work is going forward on the Trans-Oregon railroad being built westward from Vale by the Oregon Eastern Ry. Trains are running to a point 37 miles from Vale and grading operations will be continued throughout the winter.

Following a visit of committees from the Legislatures of Oregon and Washington and of Geological Survey officials, a recommendation has been made for the appropriation of $150,000 from three sources to make a thorough investigation and survey of the proposed Celilo Falls waterpower site. Engineers in the party stated that the project is feasible and that 300,000 horsepower may be developed the year around and 236,000 additional horsepower for 8 months of the year. It is said that this can be made the biggest water power plant in the world with the cost of generation the lowest.

TAFT NAMES 114 FEDERAL JUDGES

Before he quits office President Taft expects to send to the Senate the nominations of five more Federal judges, making a total of 114 in his administration, a record unequalled in four years, so far as available documents show, by any other President. Counting these five nominations and ten already sent to the Senate but still unconfirmed, Mr. Taft will have named 68 per cent of the 195 Federal judges provided for by the statutes.

While the President is known to regard his appointments to the Supreme Court as the most important he has made, and he has named five of the nine members of that court and a chief justice, he has taken great pride in his selection of circuit, district and territorial judges who enjoy life tenure and of that sort Mr. Taft has appointed 65 per cent.

Mr. Roosevelt in his first term named 43 life judges and in his second 41. Mr. McKinley named 23 life judges, Mr. Cleveland in his second term 27, and Mr. Harrison 49.

Cedarville Record: Walter Rae, showed us a handsome ring yesterday the set of which was made of one of the opals found east of here. The gem is certainly a beautiful one and shows all colors of the rainbow. These stones are valuable, and the jeweler who polished Mr. Rae's opal informed him that its value is eighty dollars.

Let the Examiner figure on your next Job Printing.
