THE SELECTION OF A DAIRY BREED

There is no necessity for hesitation in the selection of a dairy breed, says the Kansas Farmer. Therefore it is our judgment that certain conditions should govern in the selection of a breed. These are conditions of environment more than anything else. However, we are more and more convinced that the question of individuality is of greater importance than the breed. It is possible for the man who is a good judge of dairy cattle to go into the country and pick up cows here and there and bring together a herd of almost any size the individuals of which would be good milkers and not in one animal would there be a drop of dairy blood.

This fact, together with the fact that among the pure breeds of all breeds are some of the worst kind of scrubs, proves the contention that individuality is not more important than the breed, but fully as important as the breeding. It is not necessary for any farmer who has a desire to build up a herd of profitable producing cows to go into the breeding of pure bred cattle.

The great records in milk and butter fat production made by the Holsteins in recent years have aroused universal interest in that great breed of dairy cattle. While admirers of other dairy breeds acknowledge that Holsteins are great producers, they claim that the Jerseys, Ayrshires and Guernseys in the case may be, produce milk and butter more economically. As a matter of fact, all the recognized dairy breeds are winners in the hands of competent men. Theobald Pieteris Colanthe Lad, shown here with his first prize aged Holstein bull at the 1912 California state fair. He was bred and is owned by the University of Nevada.

ble of any breed. If he has the ability to judge and select he can obtain animals of nondescript breeding which will furnish him with profitable quantities of milk.

In doing this, however, he does not accomplish the results which as a dairyman will give him the largest return. We have yet to know the first dairy farmer who has undertaken the building up of a herd along lines of good breeding as well as good individuality who has not been able to sell all the surplus pure bred stock he produced at good prices. The production of milk and cream is only one side of profitable dairying. What may be termed the side issues not infrequently become the principal sources of income.

The power of heredity must be recognized. It is absolutely certain that the quality of live stock—whether it be dairy cows or stock cattle—cannot be improved unless better blood be brought into that herd from the outside. It is only by intelligent breeding on systematic lines that quality can be obtained or maintained. The object of quality is that of utility through a cow which will produce more butter fat or a calf which will grow more rapidly, mature earlier and which will place beef on its back at a lower cost. It is useless to undertake to improve any herd unless it be that the utility of the herd is to be improved. Hazardous breeding with no definite determination as to utility is the bane of the live stock business in general. Determine first that a better service must be required from our herds and breed to that end.

Silage For Beef Cattle.
There has probably been more experimental work upon feeding corn silage to fattening cattle than upon any other feed for fattening animals, says the Kansas Farmer. The results secured at the experiment stations of Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania are conclusive in many respects. They show that where corn and hay from legumes are used as a basal ration the addition of corn silage will not make any material change either in the rate, cost of gains or in the finish secured, but where a concentrate rich in protein, such as cottonseed meal, is added to a ration of corn, corn silage and hay the result will be noticed in an increase in the rate and a decrease in the cost of gains as well as an increase in the selling value and dressing percentage of the cattle. A ration of corn, cottonseed meal and clover or alfalfa hay in every respect for fattening steers.

Exercise the Breeding Stock.
Insufficient exercise in the stallion as well as the brood mare is the cause of weak foals and scarcity of foals in the corn belt. The stallion should have regular exercise, and breeders should refuse to breed mares to a stallion that the manager fails to give his daily exercise. On the range where the male and female run at large the foals secured are almost 40 per cent higher than in the corn belt where the stallion is kept in a small, highly fenced lot. This condition is partially due to the grass feed on the range no doubt, but exercise is a potent part of the success on the range nevertheless.

SELECTING THE TURKEY HENS.

It is strange that many turkey raisers think the gobblers the whole "shebang" and any little turkey hen will do. My lady in the picture doesn't think so and she knows.

She is just saying, "This is a beautiful turkey pullet, but I'll not use her for a breeder until she is two years old; then she will be fully matured and her eggs will hatch strong pullets." Pity more turkey raisers aren't like-minded! Many of them mate good gobblers to any old hen or little pullet; then they blame their failure on the weather, the blackhead disease or the general carelessness of the turkey constitution.

The woods are "jib" full of "jib" turkey pessimists. But, mind you, tame turkeys don't mature in a year, and two years or over is the correct age to mate hens, and these should come from fresh blooded stock raised in a nature. The pullet pictured weighs twelve pounds. The standard weights for adult hens are: Bronze, 20 pounds; Narragansett, Holland, Black Buff, Bourbon and Slate, 18 pounds.

Bronze, Bourbon and Narragansett hens below fourteen and Holland, Black, Buff and Slate hens below twelve pounds are disqualified at shows. We are not a stickler for show weights—the winners are often too heavy for breeders—but believe in matured turkeys of a size to meet the market call.

What should you do with the turkey pullets? Sell the undesirable and keep those reserved for breeders busy.

A PRITTY TURKEY PULLET.
By setting them on the adult turkey hen's eggs and let them mother the pullets. That will give them practice and beats the suicidal policy of putting nature fake, lousy, scabby legged chicken clucks on the job.

A good turkey breeder should have length, breadth, depth and plumpness of body, and these points must be kept in view in choosing breeders.

A good hen, while more refined than the gobbler, has a bright eye, good sized head, "middlin'" long, strong, graceful neck, good sized throat with the abundant caruncles, broad rounded back, curving gracefully toward long tail; breast round, deep, full, curving much breast meat; good, strong frame; body, large, long, deep through middle, egg shaped with round end front; plump thighs, shanks thick and of good length, feet large and set wide apart.

A healthy turkey is sleek, active, alert for food and always clean unless kept in a hutch, which is a turkey killer. The pullet pictured is very gentle, as all turkey mothers should be taught to be.

FEATHERS AND EGGSHELLS.

Pullets that make a premature start in laying generally lay a small egg, and it improves little in size as they grow older. The early egg stunts them.

A New York poultry plant advertises 10,000 pullets and 500 surplus yearling hens for sale. The day was when 1,000 chickens a year was considered a great capacity. This big plant can ship an order of 10,000 Peking ducks and not make a dent in its vast flocks.

One reason for poor results in the spring is delay in mating up breeders. The fancier who sends his best birds to the last shows nearly always gets left, for his birds are not only mated late, but are generally out of condition from the exposure, excitement and close confinement that attend showing.

If your state is not sending out poultry lecturers to the farmers' institutes ask for them. The orchard, the dairy, the field crops, all have their experts who are sent out to give up to date information on these subjects, and the billion dollar hen, that beats all the farm crops but corn, should be given due importance on the institute program also.

The English are stuck on brown eggs, white shelled eggs selling lower. Some English dealers dye the white eggs brown to catch the higher price. While brown is the call in Boston, New York and San Francisco prefer them white. The people in general in this country aren't so particular about the shell, but the smell.

A fancier of Gompton, Cal., boasts a Rhode Island Red pullet without wings. She should be mated to the crowless rooster invented in Maine, and a race of fowls would be evolved that would surely not dig up neighbors' gardens nor disturb the late snores of the high ball bridge society.

EVERY SETTLER IS WORTH $1000

More Energy is Urged To Win Settlers For Valley

"Every good, clean, prudent and energetic settler is worth $1,000 to any community in which he settles and makes his home."

This is the statement of Land Commissioner Shaffer, of the N. C. O. railway. To reinforce his belief he adds: "Texas, Oklahoma and other states where settlement has been rapid, realizes this and admits that $1,000 is a low estimate of value. The Canadian Pacific railroad regards them as being so valuable that it loans them any amount up to $2,000 at six per cent interest, and this has taken many people from this country to that bleak and in many ways uninviting place.

"Suppose a new settler, with a family of four, that number being regarded as the average, should conclude to purchase property and locate with you. The real estate dealer, or the man who owns the farm purchased is the first man to reap a reward, either as an earned commission or as a profit on the land. Then the lumber dealer, and the machinery man, the dry goods man, the doctor, the lawyer and business men in every line reap their share.

"We need more life in Goose Lake Valley more people and more energy. The Commercial organizations should take these matters up and make a fight to win good, honest settlement and development."

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Lakeview People to Neglect

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined, Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, gravel and Briget's disease, follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Help the kidneys with the reliable and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in this locality.

N. Marchand, Warden Ave., Klamath Falls, Ore., says: "About two years ago I first noticed symptoms of kidney trouble. My back pained me intensely and I was obliged to jarise many times at night, owing to frequent passages of the kidney secretions. Often my back was so weak that I had to quit work. Doan's Kidney Pills were finally brought to my attention and I began using them. They restored my kidneys to a normal condition, stopping the pains in my back. I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit for my cure and highly recommend them to other kidney-sufferers."
