LAW DIRECTED AT LIQUOR INTERESTS

Governor is Vested With Power to Enforce Criminal Laws

First in importance of all the so-called crusade laws passed by the legislature, and which went into effect June 3 is Senate Bill No. 292, giving the Governor power to appoint special District Attorneys and peace officers to enforce the criminal laws of the state when a Circuit Judge shall decree that the regularly elected officers are derelict in executing them.

Briefly the bill provides that whenever, in the opinion of the Governor, the criminal laws are not being faithfully enforced by any District Attorney, Sheriff, Constable or Justice of the Peace he may lay whatever facts he may possess against the officer, before the judge of the Circuit Court in the county in which he resides. Without delay the judge shall consider the evidence submitted, and should he find that the officer complained against is guilty the Governor may appoint a special officer for 90 days to enforce the law, which the regularly elected officers failed to execute.

Complaint after complaint has reached the Governor during the last year that the criminal laws were not being enforced by the officers charged with their execution. An investigation disclosed the fact that he did not have power to remove officers who failed or refused to do their duty, and there was a grave question as to whether he could appoint special officers in their stead. The bill passed is intended to remedy this situation, and it is believed that it will result in a far better enforcement of the criminal laws in the state.

Ranking second in importance to this bill are S. B. No. 64 and H. B. No. 49 the former regulating the shipment of liquor into dry territory, and the latter providing that disreputable houses may be declared nuisances and abated. The first named bill provides that each package of liquor shipped into dry territory shall have written or printed on it the name of the consignee, the name of the consignor, the name and address of the person ordering it, the kind and quality of liquor, and the place from and to which it is shipped.

The second bill provides that any person who shall establish or lease any building for gambling or other improper purposes shall be guilty of maintaining a nuisance, and that the building or grounds upon which it is maintained and the fixtures, musical instruments and contents of the building shall be pronounced a nuisance. Under the terms of the bill any district attorney or taxpayer may institute a suit to abate the nuisance, and should the court find from the evidence that one exists it shall issue a perpetual injunction abating it.

Two other bills of consequence affecting the liquor traffic were enacted. One of these provides that a saloon man who sells liquor to a drunkard or intoxicated person, shall be liable at the suit of the wife or husband, parent or child of such person, for all damages which may follow therefrom. The other provides that in indictments for violations of the liquor laws it shall not be necessary to allege the kind of liquor sold, nor describe the place where it is sold, nor allege knowledge upon the part of the principal to convict him of the acts of his agent or servant. It also makes persons to whom liquor is sold competent witnesses in cases prosecuted for violations of the liquor laws.

Homesteaders in Central Oregon are making good, declares President Joseph Young, of the Hill lines in Oregon, who lately accompanied Louis W. Hill, of the Great Northern, on an extended tour of the State. Crop conditions are said to be excellent with prospects of a big yield. Development work of all kinds is going ahead well and new settlers are coming in from the East and establishing themselves.

THE SWINEHERD.

Hogs turned into cowpens when the peas are about ripe should increase 200 to 500 pounds per acre, and the land will be better later from growing the peas.

The idea that anything is good enough for a pig is a mistaken one.

Pigs need exercise, for their sole purpose and use in life are to produce muscle.

A good plan is to make the hog lots long and narrow and sow them to pasture, plowing up alternately.

There is no animal that responds more quickly or more profitably to good treatment than the pig.

When the hogs have free access to salt there is little danger of their eating enough to injure themselves.

It is almost impossible to crowd the young pigs too fast, provided you have the right kind of food and care.

CARE OF SPRING FOALS.

Safe Method of Handling the Mare and Her Offspring.

When work first begins after foaling go very slow with the mare, writes Annandale in the National Stockman. Her muscles will be a little soft. Toughest her into the work gradually, feed her all the good, clean grain and bran she will eat up clean, a pound of good hay per day for every hundredweight she weighs, and when grass grows keep her in the stable at night, no matter what the general practice may be with the other horses. If you turn her out to grass you will change the quality, composition and effect of her milk, and the foal will start scouring just as surely as the mare gets her belly filled with grass. That will set him away back at the best, whereas if he is carried along on a uniform supply of milk from his dam he will not suffer from digestive troubles.

This is the keynote of the whole performance. If you feed this mare the amount of grain and hay she should have to nurse the foal, do her work and retain condition, she will have no room inside her for a wad of slushy grass. She will eat it, though, if she gets the chance, and, if she does, digestive trouble will ensue and her milk will hurt the foal badly.

Feed the mare corn and oats half and half by weight with a fifth as much bran added. Feed the foal oatmeal for the first three months, then Percheron horses continue to hold their own as the most popular breed of draft horses in the United States. While Shires, Clydesdales and Belgians have many admirers, and justly so, the Percheron has lost no ground. The farmer who wishes to raise drafters for the market will make no mistake in selecting any of the breeds, but the Percheron seems to have the call in many sections. When coupled with native mares the Percheron has been very successful in the getting of foals that take on the characteristics of their sire. The illustration shows a Percheron foal from a grade mare of Percheron blood.

corn and bruised oats half and half with one-fifth bran—and feed both of them all they will eat up clean and come hungry to the next meal. If it is desired to be especially good to the foal, give him a couple of quarts of fresh new milk from the cow night and morning, not more, and let him have also a handful of linseed oil meal (pea size) in his feed right along. See that he has a good stall and a nice shady paddock to run in, with company always. Turn his mother in with him at nightfall after she is thoroughly cooled out, feeding her both grain and a little hay at night after they have been turned together. After the mare has eaten her breakfast and her morning meal of hay, the youngster will have pumped her perfectly dry, when she can be led to the work stable, cleaned off, harnessed and go to work.

To take up a little fellow's attention when she is taken away make a practice of giving him his morning drink of new milk about that time. Give him the evening drink around 6 o'clock. Then he won't want to tear his dam to pieces to get her milk away from her when she finally reaches the stall. At noon when the mare comes in milk her udder half empty and let her stand until she is quite cool—be sure of that. Then let the little one suck his fill and take the mare away again to the work stable. On coming home at night always milk some of the milk out of the udder. If the mare is hot deprive her of quite one-half of it. Then by the time she is thoroughly cooled out the udder will be quite full again. By hand milking this way the flow of milk is not decreased, even though there is an apparent waste. Mares make milk quickly, and their productive qualities can be increased just as those of half-bred can.

PROPERTY OWNERS ONLY CAN VOTE

Equal Suffrage Does Not Change Qualifications at School Elections

"The passage of the women's suffrage amendment no way affects qualifications of voters at school elections. To qualify a voter—man or woman—his or her name must appear on tax roll now in process of collection. If one has shares or ownership in any firm, corporation or copartnership having property on tax roll, one may vote, even if his or her name does not appear (A wife's interest in her husband's property is not such as to qualify under the foregoing clause, unless her name appears on roll.)

"In districts of the third class any head of a family, who has children between ages of four and twenty may vote.

"Persons having no property on assessment roll, who are not heads of families having children of school age, or who have no shares or ownership in any firm, corporation or copartnership with property on roll, are not eligible to vote, and it is the right of any school elector to challenge any doubtful voter.

"In case of challenge the chairman shall administer oath touching qualifications of the voter.

"Living on a homestead does not qualify."

Town Plans Economy

Klamath Northwestern: Since the election of Woodrow Wilson and the re-election of Judge Worden, the city council of Merrill has been figuring on ways to cut expenses.

After due deliberation it was decided that the salary of the councilmen could not be reduced for they receive none. The Mayor gets in the neighborhood of nothing for his services and the city fathers felt that he could not get along on less.

The city fire department is being operated as cheaply as possible and so it arrived at the conclusion, or a part of the council did, that the salary of $50 a month being paid to the police force—T. M. Durham being the force—be reduced to $25.

A motion to this effect was put before the council at its meetings a few nights ago and the matter was referred to the finance committee for investigation.

CURE FOR STOMACH DISORDERS

Disorders of the stomach may be avoided by the use of Chamberlain's Tablets. Many very remarkable cures have been effected by these tablets. Sold by all dealers.

On and after June 1, people desiring to burn slashings or use fire in timbered or brush covered areas, must secure permits from a State Warden. Although, throughout the season, rainfall has been well distributed, a few warm days will make the starting of serious forest fires a possibility; and people are warned to use every precaution to prevent such occurrences.

GAINING BY GOOD ROADS.

The Farmer, Not the Motorist, is Benefited Most.

It is not unnatural that a wrong impression prevails as to the class of people who will be most benefited by good roads. The enthusiasm of automobile owners for good roads and the large number of cars seen in all parts of the country have given the impression that the automobilists will be the largest gainers. This is, however, an erroneous idea, as a "road census" taken would show that the motorcar owners are in the minority, and the people deriving the greatest benefit are the farmers.

While the users of motorcars may assist in the work of creating public sentiment in favor of road improvement, the real benefit to the country is in the saving to the farmers in transportation and in the enhanced farm production which better marketing facilities engender. Many a farmer will take to market over good roads a load of early potatoes for which he can get $1.50 a bushel, while with bad roads it would not have occurred to him to plant them. The difference to him is between a quick trip to town early in the morning over an improved road or a slow, laborious trip, taking practically an entire day over bad roads. It is everywhere admitted that with the improvement of our roads, farm lands will greatly enhance in value. All of these arguments in favor of a strong agitation for better roads should receive the earnest attention of every farmer.

Our faithful servants, the horses and mules, should also be considered in this matter, as it is nothing less than cowardly to let these patient, dumb servants be lashed through mud and ruts, straining every nerve to serve—Farm Press.

Lincoln on Road Building.
The pretense that it would overwhelm the treasury to engage in the building of roads is no more true in congress than in the state legislatures, if one will overwhelm the national treasury, so the other will overwhelm the state treasury. (Go where we will, the difficulty is the same.—A. Lincoln.

No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back if the kidneys are weak. You cannot reach the cause. Lakeview residents would do well to profit by the following example.

C. C. Kribe, 33 North Grove St., Medford, Oregon, says: "From personal experience with Doan's Kidney Pills, I feel justified in recommending them. I suffered from a dull ache in the small of my back for months. The kidney secretions were also unnatural and at times retention existed. Upon learning of Doan's Kidney Pills I obtained a supply and began using them. Two or three boxes entirely rid me of the trouble and improved my health.
