Uncommon Sense . . .

By JOHN BLAKE

NEGLECTED GENIUS

ONE of the best-known of modern poets, ill and destitute after a lifetime of toil, announces cheerfully that he is emphatically not a neglected genius.

True, he has no money, but it was not money that he worked for. His fame is perhaps not as great as his talent merited, but he did not work for fame. He worked for the joy of working, and that was enough.

He looks back upon life feeling that it brought him all that he could ask. Genius is not neglected any more than diamonds are neglected, and for the same reason. This man, had he chosen, could now be comfortably supplied with money.

We believe that he should have been. Every man owes it to himself to gain independence, and money means independence. Our poet's celebrity could have been coined into enough cash to ease his old age, but if he preferred to neglect his opportunities it is nobody's business but his own.

It is his absence of bitterness that is worth heeding. He has discovered, what every other man should discover, that no earnest effort is wasted. He has learned that people are only too ready to recognize genius when they find it, and to reward it when they recognize it.

Indeed, so keen is the hunt for genius that hundreds of near-genuses grow prosperous in America as soon as they betray the least sign of talent.

Publishers and producers hunt for men who can write. Great corporations send out scouts for men with executive or engineering ability that is beyond the common order.

No musician who is really gifted ever fails of an audience. And even industrious mediocrity will sometimes be mistaken for genius and have riches thrust upon it.

Cast the fear that you may be a neglected genius from among your worries. If you are a genius somebody will find it out, and you will have to hire an office boy to keep people from invading your privacy.

Even if you are not a genius you are likely to be mistaken for one. But that will not harm you unless you make the mistake yourself. Be careful not to do that, for it will be fatal.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

WITH FLYING COLORS

IF YOU wish in your particular sphere of endeavor to reach a destination of more than ordinary importance, press untiringly forward in all kinds of weather.

Let neither heat nor cold deter or serve you from your purpose when once you have decided your course. Pay no attention to the sneers of the frivolous. Keep your mind firmly fixed on your resolve and march resolutely ahead.

There will be times when you will be exhausted, footsore and discouraged; when opposing winds beat furiously and you seem to lack sufficient strength to make another step forward. When these depressing periods overtake you, sit down and rest awhile.

Ever remember that to get the best it is necessary to give the best. Do not offend those beneath you with gruff words. Be uniformly courteous. Break no promise. Withhold judgment. Be fair in business and keep off the velvet grass-grown plot of your neighbor.

The perplexities that vex your spirit are familiar to all humanity in all walks of life. No one by any manner of means can escape them, but it is possible for anyone to overcome them.

Use your mind. Be a rational being. By patience, well-doing and faith, turn your threatened defeat into victory. Thousands of noble men and women who have passed this way before you, thus obtained mastery over themselves, scarred outwardly with the wounds of battle, but unblemished within.

Use your hands in righteous work; your eyes to look up to the beautiful arch overhead; your ears to hear good; your tongue to praise God and to cheer and encourage others less fortunate than yourself.

Rather than condemn, hold your peace.

Purge your heart of covetousness and hate.

Envy is a useless waste of energy which produces only mischief and misery.

The combined envy of the whole world cannot remove a grain of sand or grow a blade of grass.

Be charitable, kindly and industrious in whatever field you may be sowing or reaping.

Nothing is impossible to the man or woman who elects to do these things; and he and she will eventually surmount every obstacle and march triumphantly with flying colors to the long-sought destination.

SCHOOL DAYS

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"PORK-BARREL"

WHEN, in the midst of a congressional discussion upon some measure which entails the expenditure of large sums of money in different parts of the country—for example, the rivers and harbors bill—one member will denounce the bill as a "poorly disguised pork-barrel", the meaning is at once apparent to anyone familiar with American parliamentary slang, for it has come to be the accepted equivalent of an attempt to secure public money for private or semi-private purposes.

To find the genesis of the phrase we have to go back to the earlier days of the republic, when the majority of the citizens were farmers who, during the winter, were forced to live on salt pork. If their supply was adequate and their barrels well filled, they said they had no need to worry about a long, hard winter—the pork-barrel would take care of them. In a similar, but more metaphorical sense, they now look to their congressmen to take care of them by securing at least a portion of the "pork-barrel" legislation, which will lead to profits on labor, land and supplies.

Struggled Hard for Life. Strange evidence was given by the house surgeon at a Barrow (Eng.) hospital at the inquest of an eight-year-old boy. The boy died from lockjaw caused by falling and cutting his wrist on a tin. The surgeon said he died three times. He stopped breathing twice and animation was restored twice. The third time he stopped breathing it was final.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

SCOUTS AND CAMPING

"The remarkable trend of the present day among people of all walks of life toward outdoor activity, and especially camping," says a student of the out-of-doors, "is directly traceable to the influence of the boy scout program." With the slogan "Every Scout a Camper," camping among boy scouts is becoming an all-year round feature.

Scouts like everything about camping. From thumbing camp booklets to reading camp statistics, and following are some unique ones, compiled by a scout executive of Walla Walla, Washington:

Two hundred thousand scouts attended scout camps last year for one week or more. They traveled an average of 50 miles each, in going to and from camp, or a total distance of 10,000,000 miles. At the average hiking pace of three miles per hour, it would take 330 years to cover this distance, which by the way, is about 400 times around the world. In an automobile at the rate of 33 miles an hour and with no stops, it would take 33 years.

Each boy scout, it has been estimated, generates at least one-quarter horsepower while taking his morning calisthenics, which would give over 500,000 horsepower, enough to drive a heavy freight train over mountains.

The flag is raised each morning and lowered each evening at camp. At the average speed of 60 feet per minute, 40 hours are consumed each day in this one important part of camp life.

Ten train loads of food are required to feed these scouts. If they were all in one mess line this line would be over 50 miles long.

A scout in water can support about 125 pounds. If all these scout campers were brought together they could support 125 tons or the equivalent of a fair-sized ocean-going boat. The scouts consume over 50,000 gallons of water each day; or more than enough to float this boat.

The boys consume approximately 12,500 steers and all the eggs 18,000 hens would lay in one year.

SCOUT MOTTO: "BE PREPARED"

SCOUT GETS TEST

Here is how one old foreign lady in Milwaukee learned that scouts do a "Good Turn Daily."

"Our team had a baseball game scheduled," says the doer of the Good Turn, a scout of Troop 11 of that city. "All members were told if they were late they would not be permitted to play. After hurrying through my paper route I was on my way to the game when an old lady who could not speak English asked me to take a long-distance call for her. Was 20 minutes late to the game and could not play."

GOVERNOR HINKLE SAYS:

"It affords me great pleasure to most heartily endorse the Boy Scouts of America and their splendid work in time of disasters, floods and famines. They have loyally and faithfully responded to all emergency calls."

"The scouts of today are the men who will govern our country tomorrow, and a government led by men who have cherished and faithfully kept the oath of the scout is safeguarded against the worst dangers and as a nation we cannot fall."—J. F. Hinkle, Governor of New Mexico.

Care Given to Highway

Work in National Parks Great care has been given to the construction of highways in the national parks of the United States. Roads have been built through deep-cut canyons across towering mountain ranges, beside rippling streams filled with the fighting trout and into primal forests. Hotels and camps have been erected to provide comfortable accommodations in the most distant and inaccessible places.

Telephones Along Highway.

Emergency telephones are being installed along the entire White Horse pike, this popular sixty-mile highway between Philadelphia, Pa., and Atlantic City, N. J. It will be possible to call the state police, firemen, ambulance or other needed equipment at innumerable points along the highway. Relatives can be quickly summoned in case of accidents to motorists.

A MAN WHO BECAME FAMOUS

Doctor R. V. Piers, whose picture appears above, was not only a successful physician but also a profound student of the medicinal qualities of Nature's remedies, roots and herbs, and by close observation of the methods used by the Indians, he discovered their great remedial qualities, especially for weaknesses of women, and after careful preparation succeeded in giving to the world a remedy which has been used by women with the best results for half a century. Dr. Piers' Favorite Prescription is still in great demand, and many other so-called "cure-alls" have come and gone. The reason for his phenomenal success is because of its absolute purity, and Dr. Piers' high standing as an honored citizen of Buffalo is a guarantee of all that is claimed for the Favorite Prescription as a regulator for the female system.

Damage by Forest Fires.

Most forest streams are slightly acid—a condition known to be well adapted to trout—but forest fires often cause a deposit of ash which gives the streams an alkaline quality most destructive to fish life.
