KANSAS CITY CANDIDATES MUST STATE VIEWS ON DYER BILL ARE HONORED AT UNUSUAL RECEPTION

MRS. JOHN EARNEST MAPPS AND MRS. ALICE PARK GUESTS OF HONOR AT BRILLIANT RECEPTION GIVEN BY EDITOR AND MRS. CANNADY AT THEIR HOME JULY THIRTIETH

American White and Colored; Chinese, German, Irish, Jew and Spanish Give International Aspect to Gathering.—Many Acclaim Affair Most Enjoyable Ever Attended.

(Specially Reported by Miss Swain.)

Honoring Mrs. John Ernest Mapps, of Spokane, Wash., and Mrs. Alice Park of Palo Alto, California, Editor and Mrs. E. D. Cannady entertained at a reception at their home in Irvington, Wednesday evening, July 30th. Mrs. Mapps is honorary president of the Washington Federation of Colored Women's Clubs and honorary National Statistician of the Federation, and Mrs. Park, who is internationally famous for her world peace efforts and humane work, has charge of the western division of the publicity department of the International Humane Society.

This gathering was one of unusual occurrence and was different in many respects from the average reception. First because it represented several different nationalities and instead of the usual social parley, a program of rare beauty was rendered.

The hostess announced that in all her efforts, public and private, she always sought to bring about better understanding, and hence better relations between peoples of all races, and since one of the guests of honor was of international fame, she had thought to give the evening a sort of international aspect, hence guests representing different races and varied interests were invited.

The first number on the program was a song by a Chinese children's quintette, composed of three little girls and two little boys, ranging from three to five years of age; James, Joe and Jacqueline Wong; Madeline and Maxine Chinn. They sang several selections and were accompanied on the piano by Miss Mabel Chin Quong, a beautiful and accomplished young Chinese girl, who also sang a solo in her own language and an Irish song in English. This was followed by a brief talk by Ross Desmond, assistant superintendent of the Men's Resort. Mr. Desmond told of the splendid work carried on at the resort on Fourth and Burnside streets and of the plans for future development and broadening the work. Mrs. Cannady then asked Mrs. Minnie R. Trumbull to tell something of the Child Welfare Work. Mrs. Trumbull is secretary of the Child Welfare Board and Labor Commission. She spoke in part as follows:

"One of the biggest needs we find among the children of today is to break down the line which money has helped to build up, and I don't know anywhere where it is more unfriendly than it is among children. We find children who are not intended for industrial life, having an entirely wrong opinion of the children who are intended for industrial life. The idea that a man who runs a bank or who has a big business is of more importance in the world than the man who helps to do the common every-day work of the world is one which has entirely too much emphasis all the way through. When I go into the factories and I see the men dressed in their overalls and working so that we may have automobile batteries to help do the work of our machine, I begin to feel that we don't fully appreciate the value of the common every day things of life. If it weren't for those of us at the bottom, there couldn't be anybody at the top."

Rev. J. J. Handsaker, in charge of the Near East Relief Work of the Northwest, was the next one called on to speak, and he said in part: "Out in the Near East now we are facing the task of trying to save the results of the most extravagant enterprise the world ever figured out—the war that left us with 9,000,000 children without any parents. We have gathered together about one out of every sixty of those children, and have them in the largest orphanage the world has ever seen. Fifteen thousand of them are in one orphanage this summer. We begin industrial training of the children at the age of 12, and at 16 they must go out to make their way in the world. That is all we are asking of the American public, and that is that the children shall come to the age of 12 and then receive training until they are 16, and they will take care of themselves."

Jacob Weinstein, recently returned home from the Hebrew College at Cincinnati, Ohio, spoke briefly on The Youth Movement and Peace:

"I am primarily a student and still study and hope to for a great many years. We feel that as young men we have come into rather a bad heritage, and we are rather looking up to our older folks with sort of a disdainful eye, and we sometimes feel that we must unceremoniously step on the shoulders of the older generation and start over again. We feel that we must have an extended peace, and see whether law and justice and a few of the other ideals we are striving for are possible and practical. But we are in a regular paradox, a quandary and sometimes we don't blame our older students so very much."

He told of the exploitation of the Asiatic and Oriental by the American for selfish purposes and which incidentally brought these people into the knowledge of our means of warfare, which they can if they will use on us. He said that fear was the only thing that has actually caused our statesmen to use a little more kindness and tolerance in dealing with them. Continuing, Mr. Weinstein said:

"It is really more human selfishness that we can no longer exploit these people and do what we want with them. The thing that gives us hope with these eastern peoples is that they have been brought up with the eastern philosophy of life—they never let things get the best of them. They still feel that life is a spiritual thing, that it is something apart from the necessary things. We sent the missionary over to him to teach the gospel of Christ, and I think he will return this by teaching us the gospel of a sane and happy life. I think the Oriental will teach us the principles of a peaceful and just life."

George Orr Latimer, a splendid young man of one of the pioneer families of the city, was the next speaker. Mr. Latimer's talk will be published in next week's issue, as space will not permit of publishing all the program this week.

Miss Violet Hooker sang beautifully, "All For You," by Bertrand. Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, gave an interesting report of some of the outstanding features of the General Federation meeting held recently in Los Angeles, Calif. She told of the women's firm stand for law enforcement; of their interest in world peace and inter-racial relations, and stated that Mrs. Thomas G. Winters, retiring president of the General Federation, would head the department of Inter-Racial Relations, thus affording strong and sympathetic leadership of that department. Mrs. Sherman, the incoming president, Mrs. Dunbar said, would stress particularly home-life during her administration, and to this end she has created a new department called Home Life, to which all questions affecting the home life of the Nation would be referred.

Dr. Chester Easter said: "Mrs. Cannady, this is very kind of you. You give me an opportunity to speak. I think perhaps in the discussion of electronic work that my work would be more or less tiresome to you, but as Mr. Latimer was talking it struck me rather pointedly, because I view almost everything from the point of my work, that in order to attain equality, whether it be from the standpoint of sects or races, or from an economic standpoint, that it would be necessary and probably the best way finally to reach that point through the developments of science. That is, philosophy has had its day, and all the fundamental truths that we have conceived concerning equality of man and the place of man as a unit in general civilization, has been cited to us through philosophies. The discussion has been started, but after all it will remain for science to demonstrate."

SEASIDE NEWS

(By Genevieve Elizabeth Mullen)
A popular railroad man in business here over a year is J. W. Curry. Mr. Curry purchased a large lot on Seventh Street and on this lot is a four-room cottage known as The Hollywood, which is occupied for the summer by Mrs. R. Flowers and son Clifford. There are also four large tents nicely furnished and one small one. The lot is nicely fenced in and signs placed here and there "No Trespassing". Large shade trees make this tent city an ideal spot for camping. Mr. Curry's tents are reasonable, in fact he furnishes everything except food. They can't be beat for the price so why not spend a few days at the tent city and enjoy the fresh salt air and dip in the surf.

"BECAUSE FRANCE TREATED THEM RIGHT, THEY FOUGHT WELL"—ERECTS MONUMENT

(Preston News Service)
RHEIMS, France, July 25.—Dedicating a monument last Sunday to the colored troops of the great World War, General Archinard praised their courage and the exalted part they took in final victory. He replied to the German campaign against the colored troops, saying: "Our black sharpshooters conducted themselves like good Frenchmen, showing themselves worthy of fighting by our side."

The colored troops engaged before Rheims from May to July, 1918, he said comprised about a dozen battalions, or scarcely a tenth of all the troops on the front.

"They were terrible to the Germans," he continued, "because they regarded the Germans as savages fighting with disloyal arms and devastating everything for the love of evil. Our sharpshooters fought well for France because she treats them with humanity and justice, on the same footing as her other children."

Edouard Daladier, minister of the colonies, said that 890,000 black troops fought for France and 30,000 were killed on the battlefield.

WOMAN STABBED

SIKI'S DEPORTATION MAY BE ORDERED BY LABOR DEPARTMENT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 6.—Louis Fall, who has gained fame under the name of Battling Siki, may be deported from the United States. Siki is a native of the French African Colonies, victor over Georges Carpentier for the world's light heavyweight championship in Paris two years ago. He is under investigation, it is said, by immigration commissioners and inspectors of the Labor Department, in connection with his marriage a few days ago in New York to Miss Lillian Werner, alleged to be white, but subsequently declared an octroon.

Fall, according to press reports from Paris, is claimed, has a wife and a child living near the French capital. If the investigation by the immigration inspectors develops that this is true, Siki will be subject to deportation on a charge of bigamy.
