Negro Looks to White Men For Sympathy In His Fight for Justice

Editors Note.—The following is a portion of Philip Randolph's speech at the opening of the Sequoia-Centennial, Philadelphia, Pa., May 31. Owing to the length of the article we will only have space for a portion of it in this issue. The remainder will follow in next issue. Desires to read it. Honorable Chairman, ladies and gentlemen and fellow citizens: It is eminently fitting and timely that a great people should pause a brief while in their busy life, in their onward conquering march, to the acquisition of power, to take inventory of their material, technical, intellectual and spiritual, that they may not face the future, disastrously unprepared for it. The signs of the times would seem to indicate that the world we live in had moved into a cycle of political and social, economic unsettlement and uncertainty, maladjustment, consequently, largely upon the ruins of the World War, and its immediate aftermath.

Problems In this period there are three great outstanding problems: The problem of peace between nations, the problem of peace between races and the problem of peace between labor and capital. Upon the rational and permanent solution of these problems will rest the continuance of modern civilization.

In our own country, these problems are ever present, ever pressing, ever insistent upon a solution. In our own country too, one hundred and fifty years ago, the Founding Fathers, in the pursuit of one of the world's immortal documents, the Declaration of Independence, to a formula which may serve as the solvent key to our perplexing problems.

This formula reads: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are, life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just power from the consent of the governed."

To Afro-Americans, the embodiment of this formula of the practical righteous idealism into the warp and woof of American life, its laws, its customs, its institutions, its practices, its traditions, in politics, industry, in education and religion, is a constant devotion to be wished; for no people on God's green earth has suffered as grievously as the Negro people of the world on account of the failures of this formula.

But if there are those, either because of ignorance or malice, would challenge the right of Afro-Americans to share in all the glories and achievements of our country, my answer is that of all the Americans, the Negro is, doubtless, the most typically American. He is the incarnation of America, his every pore breathes its vital spirit, without absorbing its cross materialism.

Early contact with, and long residence in a land where a price of security and equality for double the assurance of a square deal. No white man can boast of longer habitation in America than can the Negro. He was a pioneer in the Western World. Garcia de Montalvo published in 1510 a Spanish chronicle which spoke of the presence of black people in an island called California. That the Negro had visited America before the coming of Columbus is again strongly established by the fact that the Negro contenance, clear and unmistakable, occurs repeatedly in Indian carvings, among the relics of the Mound Builders and in Mexican temples, according to Prof. Weiner, of Harvard, in his book, "Africa and the Discovery of America." In religious worship and in sound building, the influence of Negro customs is evident. There is accumulating ethnological and archaeological authority to give weight to the belief that African pomeiros or Negro traders were present in America before Columbus because of the discovery of the use in trading of an alloy of gold called guanin. Guanin is a Mandingo word and the very alloy of which is of American origin. Weiner again observes that the presence of Negroes with their trading masters in America before Columbus is proved by the representations of Negroes in American sculpture and designed and by the occurrence of a black nation in Darien early in the sixteenth century, more specifically by Columbus' emphatic reference to Negro traders from Guinea, who trafficked in a gold alloy, guanin, of precisely the same composition and bearing the same name as is frequently referred to by early writers in Africa.

Some ethnographers maintain that tobacco, cotton, sweet potatoes and peanuts are of African origin and were introduced to the Indians by the Negro. The Historian Helps, speaks of the presence of the Negro in the very early history of the American

ADVOCATE EDITORIAL APPRECIATED

New York, June 8, 1926

Mrs. E. D. Cannady, 312 Macleay Building, Portland, Oregon

My dear Mrs. Cannady: I am enclosing a letter from Mrs. Henry G. Leach which I thought you would like to see.

You are very truly, James Weldon Johnson, Sec. N. A. A. C. P.

Letter follows.

Dear Mr. Johnson: How nice of you to send me the editorial from the Advocate of Portland, Oregon. I had not seen it at all and was perfectly thrilled that the Negro as such should actually count me as one of their true friends. I know I am one, but feel much set up at being in the same class as such people as Mary McDowell and Jane Addams. I hope that I shall continue to be worthy of their confidence.

With all good wishes and many thanks, I am

Sincerely yours, Agnes Leach, 170 E. 64th St., New York, N. Y.

COLOR MAKES A DIFFERENCE

A colored woman in Richmond, Va. a few weeks ago was sentenced to thirty years in the penitentiary for forging checks to the amount of one hundred and eighty-five dollars. In this same court a white woman was tried for issuing worthless checks to the amount of fifteen thousand dollars. She was sentenced to six months in jail and the sentence was suspended. The judge said that owing to her condition he would pardon her to her relatives.

continent. They were with Columbus, Balboa, DeSoto and Cortes. But the claim of the Negro to an honorable place in America does not rest alone upon the fact that the Negro was one among the first people to set feet upon American soil. (Concluded next issue)

ENFRANCHISING THE NEGRO AN INJUSTICE TO BOTH RACES

Washington, D. C., June 14.—(AP) Senator Borah of Idaho, who has taken up the fight against nullification of the 18th amendment, said today that in his opinion the country's experiences with the constitutional amendments giving full civic rights to the Negro did not indicate that one relating to prohibition could be successfully nullified.

Recently the senator was misquoted in an article published here as saying that emancipation of the Negro at the time he was emancipated was a mistake. What he did say was that it was unjust to the whites and unjust to the Negro to enfranchise him without permitting him to work out through time and education his franchise.

"Much is now being said about the 14th and 15th amendments," the Idaho senator said in a statement today. "It is said in some quarters that the 14th and 15th amendments are being nullified and therefore the 18th amendment could likewise be nullified."

"I think the enfranchisement of the Negro at the time and in the manner it was brought about was a great mistake and unfair to the Negro. It put upon the latter a burden for which he was wholly unprepared and because he could not meet that burden he has been severely criticized. It would have been far better if he had followed the advice of Lincoln and granted the right to vote as the colored man prepared for it."

President Borno is here, it is thought for the purpose of trying to arrange with New York bankers for the floating of another sixteen million dollar loan.

The fact that President Borno is a colored man may cause a storm of protests from the prejudice element of this country as was true when President Roosevelt dined with the late Booker T. Washington.

DETROIT, Mich., June 15.—The injunction filed by Frank Rosa Schulte and Mollie P. Winter and wife, and the Lakewood Boulevard Civic Association for the purpose of restraining Mr. and Mrs. Starke, two prosperous race citizens, from occupying their beautiful new home recently built in the Lakewood Boulevard subdivision, near Grosse Pointe, was sustained Tuesday by Judge Leland W. Carr, of Lansing, visiting in Wayne circuit court.

He up held the right of a colored person to own property in the Lakewood Boulevard subdivision, but denied the right of any member of our group to occupy the premises. Judge Carr ruled the restrictions of the subdivision which say, "Property shall not be sold nor leased to persons whose ownership would be injurious to the locality" are sufficient to bar the Starkes from occupying the house, but held that the restrictions were not to be sold nor leased to persons whose ownership would be injurious to the locality. Mrs. Starke, a prominent matron of Oakland, Calif., spent the week-end in Portland as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis A. Goodwin, 1122 E. Salmon Street. VOTERS TO PASS ON SCHOOLS TAX

Portland (Oregon) Election to Authorize $4,800,000 for Development

Portland, Oregon, June 15.—Tax payers in Portland at the school election Saturday, June 19, will vote upon two measures affecting development and maintenance of Portland schools.

One measure provides a tax levy yielding about $1,300,000 to round out the running expenses of schools, as outlined by the budget. The other provides a bond issue of $4,500,000 to carry on the second 5-year period of the 15-year building program.

The tax levy is made necessary because Oregon has a law that no school district without the vote of the people can levy taxes for more than 6 per cent over the amount raised the previous year. In the current years budget is an item of $61,000 which fully to institute the single salary schedule for Portland teachers.

The general policy of the schedule, based on equal pay for equal service and looking at a sign above the door but funds were not sufficient to put it into full operation.

The building program for two years ago by the school board following the survey of the United States Bureau of Education, involves the expenditure of $15,000,000 in order to replace 60 per cent of the school buildings. These structures were found to be obsolete, many of them temporary.

Building Ahead of Schedule The first five-year period will not elapse until September, 1927, but its building program has been practically accomplished, and the need for new buildings are needed at once to replace portable at Beach, Sabin Dunewood and Errol Heights, and these would be the first provided with funds from the bond issue. Several building replacements are planned.

Partakers one half food are the Girl's Polytechnic School, the High School of Commerce, and Ladd Grade School.

Choice of two new school directors is another issue of the election. Four who have announced their candidacy are: Frank F. Shull for the past six years a member of the board; George B. Thomas, ex-member; Roy T. Bishop, president of the Oregon Western Mills, and Harry Coffin, of the National Safety Council.

A committee of 1000, composed of as many citizens interested in school progress, has organized and is working for the bond issue and the tax levy.

Nineteen School Plan Praised Praising teacher work is being done in co-operation with the Commonwealth fund program for the prevention of delinquency. HOW LONG?

The building was a quarter block and one covering a large block in the heart of one of our Western cities. Arriving late Saturday night, a stranger, I had enquired for the Young Woman's Christian Association and found there an inviting room that had proved so comfortable that I did not wake till afternoon the Sabbath Day. Lying there musing after waking I thought of me of an old time school mate who had married and removed to this city to live and I determined to look her up that afternoon. The telephone soon put me in touch with her and I arranged to visit her after luncheon.

As I left the Y. W. C. A. building to make my visit the sweet strains of "Holy, Holy, Holy" sung by a host of young, girlish voices struck my ears and I recognized that the Sunday afternoon vesper service was beginning.

"How lovely," I thought, "that here in this great city is a place where across those few blocks I would reach another carline that would take me to my destination more quickly and by a more pleasant route. So I took my way through streets that are looking at a sign above the door I saw the words 'Colored Young Woman's Christian Association.' And as the car went on its way the words of the colored singers followed me.

"The fellowship of kindred minds, Is like that above." After a delightful afternoon spent with my friend recalling old days and acquaintances I started on my return. My friend told me that by walking across town a few blocks I would reach another carline that would take me to my destination more quickly and by a more pleasant route. So I took my way through streets that are looking at a sign above the door I saw the words 'Colored Young Woman's Christian Association.' And as the car went on its way the words of the colored singers followed me.

As I walked leisurely along enjoying the color of the spring, Sabbath evening the notes of a Christian hymn again floated to me on the breeze.

"The Churches one Foundation Is Jesus Christ her Lord, She is His new creation, By water and the Word."

Looking up I found I was passing what had once been a handsome residence, but was now falling into decay and again a sign greeted my eyes, this time bearing the words "Japanese Young Woman's Christian Association."

As I passed down the street the voices of the singers followed in another verse of the old hymn.

"Elect from every nation, Yet one o'er all the earth, Her character of Salvation One Lord, one Faith, one Birth One holy name she blesses, Praising one holy food, And to the one hope presses With every grace ended."

And wondering down the quiet street there seemed to come to me those words uttered so long ago on the ancient heights of Mars Hill, "He hath made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on all the face of the earth," and following this the text "One is your Master, even Christ and all ye are brethren." "Why then," I wondered, "should we who are members of the same faith in Christian America be separated one from another by racial lines? And I thought of the time when Jesus "must needs go through Samaria" for no other apparent reason than to rebuke the race prejudice of the Jews who held in contempt those of their racial strains.

"How long, Oh Lord, I murmured, "must it be until thy children shall learn to practice these great teachings of thy Son?" And again I say, "How long!"
