grandmothers! He said further that she had no national spirit. In nothing else except in the bearing arms clause does he show such a strong reason for being asked to resign from the court. Isn't it proof that she has a desire to become a part of the American Nation that she applied for citizenship here? I don't believe that a judge of the United State Supreme Court wrote that decision. But how was written by Fred Marvin. I think it do you account for the other judges who signed such an expression of super-patriotic drive? It beats me. I can only find comfort in the old adage "give the calf more rope, etc."

Well, I always thought that Arthur Brisbane was a super-intellect man. Now I think there are times when he has either eaten too much chocolate cake and has a spell of indigestion or that his intellect is not a super one. In his column in a recent edition of The Telegram he gives out quite authoritatively the program of the country. That is he says to the pacifists (forgetting that we pacifists may have another viewpoint) that we shall so equip this country with the machinery of war that we will be in a position to say to the rest of the world "strike at us and we shall strike at you where you live and you will never forget us". And he goes on to say as regards the Western Hemisphere "we live here, don't want anything our neighbors (meaning Mexico and South America) don't want anybody to interfere with them don't intend to allow it and don't want anybody to interfere with us". Noble utterance, Mr. Brisbane should be on the Supreme Court Bench—Butler type of intellect. Thank heaven with Ramsey MacDonald at the helm England's ship of state will not be wrecked on America's reefs, and the blatherings of such men as Brisbane will go unnoticed except by the D.A.R. et al.

I do weep however whenever I hear anyone criticizing our young people. I weep to think of the messy world of this generation are passing on to them to live in and reconstruct. Just as the young men of England said to their elders who were sending them to die in the trenches—"This is your war—you are too old to fight so you are sending us to die and rot—it isn't fair—we want to live"—just so our young people are saying to us—"how dare you find fault with us—how dare you find fault with us. Look at the mess you have made of social conditions. You cannot or do not clean it up yourselves. Hands off—we try to do it." It is coming folks—just exactly that challenge is coming.

UP AND DOWN THE EASTERN SHORE

Child's in New York! Lunch at Wana-maker's! I must pause here a minute and tell you about it. Any time I must pass through Philadelphia I plan that lunch. If my train is a few minutes late I dash out of Broad Street Station, through the Court House arch and there stands Wana-maker's great department store.

There are other Wana-maker's stores, but none like the one in Philadelphia. This store is the headquarters, the center, the chief of the great Wana-maker industries. The last time I was there was a few days before Easter. The store is built up about a great center court. On this day great banks of Easter lilies filled the court; paintings rare and valuable hung around the balcony; one forgot that this was a market of buying and selling and thought rather of peace and magnitude of a great cathedral. Twelve o'clock had not yet struck so I strolled leisurely through the store. One entire floor is devoted to music art; there is a Chinese room, an Egyptian room filled with paintings and stately. John Wana-maker seemed to have poured out his life in this temple of beauty. At twelve o'clock I was seated at a table gleaming with snowy linen and shingling silver near the balcony rail. And then came music; fill the air, rising, falling, the roll of a mighty pipe organ, the strains of a seventy-five piece orchestra mingled there above the heads of the weary shoppers and for one hour he who would drowned thought, time worries, cares in the sheer beauty of perfect music. This is the daily contribution which one mere business man makes to the people of America.

Dinner at Child's in New York is of course dinner at Child's! But to me an even more interesting meal may be eaten at one of the "Automatics". Perhaps you now have them in Portland. One pops in a nickle, or two nickles as the case may be, a tiny door clicks and one draws out anything from a half fried chicken to rolls better than mother used to make. Now, of course, the blase New Yorker looks very much bored and pretends to long for home and mother's cooking, but I doubt his sincerity, for I know that mother seldom had the time or energy to produce such dainty and tasty salads or such delicious brown betty. Right here may I say a word regarding that much talked of bug-a-boo—the High Cost of Living. I was told that I would undoubtedly starve in the east.

SUMMER PRINTS Combined coolness in feeling and looks is the aim for every summer frock, and nothing is more effective in this fashion than the sleeveless printed frock. Simplicity of style is emphasized in this model with its surplice cape collar effect finished off by a narrow pleated frill. A long line is achieved by adding the circular left side drapery to an otherwise straight skirt. The wide band inserted at the hipline in a semi-diagonal line ties in a small bow at the side. This is nice with sleeves and is also shown without the collar and with short sleeves. Excella Pattern No. 2974. Sizes 14 to 46, 25 cents.

THE GRADUATION FROCK This little graduation frock adopts for its own the two-tiered flares and the graceful cape collar which Paris displays on its smartest grown-up models for summer days. It is sleeveless, of course, for the Junior, like her older sister, is scornful of sleeves this season, especially in choosing her party frocks. However, the cape collar, covering the upper part of the arms, softens the sleeveless mode and renders the dress particularly becoming to the girl who is at the growing stage of "all arms and legs." OUR FRIENDLY NEIGHBORS East Tennessee News (White), Knoxville Recently a young woman member of the Negro racial group fainted, following an accident that occurred in a section of our city inhabited entirely by white people. The fine spirit exhibited by the men and women in administering restoratives, promptly and willingly summoning medical aid and otherwise exhibiting attention was the source of favorable comment on the part of the many who watched the situation. In an automobile collision in which the drivers were members of the opposite races, it was clear to a white witness that the white driver was at fault and despite the fact that pressure was brought to bear to have him remain silent as to what he saw, he unhesitatingly stated, "In justice to all I declare that the collision resulted from recklessness and violation of a city ordinance on the part of the white driver."
