Older motors with big piston clearance could stand lots of carbon

The new high-compression motors have as little as 1/32 of an inch between the top of the piston and the cylinder head—flint carbon is ruinous to them, even in small quantities

A handful of flint carbon... and only 1/32 of an inch to put it in

Not only does Shell Motor Oil form 2/3 less carbon—the little it does form is soft, soot-like, a kind that blows easily away

You've probably seen mechanics working on one of the older type motors—scraping layers of carbon off the piston heads—a big handful of it from one motor! But the newer engines could never stand such carbon deposits. Some of them have only the thickness of a knife blade between piston and cylinder head—no room at all for carbon.

bon-forming oils. For science has perfected one oil that is vitally different. Only a little soft soot Shell Motor Oil, the result of a new refining process, forms less than one-third the carbon of even the costliest oils; no hard carbon, only a little soot that blows easily away through the exhaust. Its lubricant value is far greater than old type oils. Careful refining leaves all its "body" intact ready to resist even the most violent changes in temperature. Insist on Shell Motor Oil every time you buy. It is almost a necessity in today's motors.

SHELL MOTOR OIL

Shell 400, the new "dry" gas that burns cleanly and keeps out of the crankcase, is the ideal running mate for Shell Motor Oil. Even Shell Motor Oil can be ruined by "thinning" with a "wet" gas
