By DR. M. N. BUNKER
Nationally Known Grapho-Analyst.

YOUR handwriting does not show whether you have any ordinary disease. It does not show whether you are tall or short, heavy or lean. It is not a picture of your physical being, but of that part of your nature which gives you your character, your disposition, and your talents. If you have a sharp, sarcastic tongue, saying things that hurt people, it will show in your writing. If you are peaceful, without any desire to quarrel, it will show in your writing—in the way that you make certain letters.

A number of years ago, I was talking with a very successful business man. He had just had an analysis of his writing—and the analyst told him he had heart trouble, and was likely to die. The business man however was in perfect health. He did not have anything wrong with his heart, but had just passed an examination for a fifty thousand dollar life insurance policy, and was absolutely fit.

Yet there are people who think that they can see in one's writing what they call "heart ticks," which are evidence of a weak or faulty heart. There are other people who think that they can discover whether a person has tuberculosis. In this case, they believe that such sufferers will write a hand with "waves," and that cancer patients will suffer a severe change in their writing.

If you have any of these troubles, you are invited to send in a specimen of your writing for a special analysis. In doing this you will be helping in a scientific research, worth while.

However until something definite is really discovered you may look at your signature and know that it tells the truth about your brain, about your personality. It tells whether you like to meet people, or whether you like only one or two close friends. It tells whether you like to make things with your hands, or will make a success studying law, or engineering.

This little specimen here shows that the writer has literary talent; that if she really tries she can learn to write fiction, books, stories, and make a name for herself.

Your writing tells what you can do—intellectually. There may be a few diseases that will show in handwriting, but very few. It is the you—the soul of you—that shows in your handwriting.

KEEP your candy in the refrigerator during hot weather. A cold dry atmosphere is best for all kinds of candy, and particularly for chocolates. Bon bons are far more appetizing when chilled than when they are allowed to remain in the heat and soften. So unless you have teeth that can't chew them when cool and tasteful, see that they are kept cool.

Are you troubled with "hard" water, which causes your hands to crack? Squeeze a little lemon juice into your washing water and note the difference—but be sure not to do this when you have colored clothes to wash.

Many little things make much. Nothing is more true than this. If each woman in the United States would place one dollar a year in a fund, there would be something like twenty-five million dollars which could be expended for a hospital, woman's college, or almost anything. And if one woman would slip one dollar each week in the bank, she would have pretty close to two thousand dollars in cash at the end of twenty years—for it is surprising how quickly interest adds to the principal sum. And yet we reach the age of forty, fifty or sixty and find ourselves with little or nothing.

A PAIR OF PINEAPPLE RECIPES Fruit Cup

Halve three oranges, remove pulp, notch the shells and set in a bowl of cold water. To the orange pulp add two cups crushed pineapple with part of syrup left in, two sliced bananas, ¼ lb. Malaga grapes (peeled and seeded), and ¼ cup sugar. Chill the fruit mixture and serve in orange cups—garnishing with a maraschino cherry.

Brown-Eyed Susan Salad

Place slice of pineapple on a lettuce leaf. Mold pimiento cheese, or cream cheese to which butter coloring and cayenne pepper have been added, into slender pointed rolls long enough to cover pineapple from center to edge. Lay rolls on slice like petals of a flower. Stone a ripe olive and place in center, trimming under-side to make it fit. Garnish with mayonnaise. (Whites of hard-boiled eggs colored in beet vinegar may be used to make a pink flower.) Instead of the ripe olive, you could use a plum, large cherry or any colorful fruit or berry available.

The Paris Pepper-Pot

FOR a long time we had been wanting to meet Harry Wellmon. We had heard of him in Amsterdam, Vienna, Berlin and other places we had visited but never happened to be in the same city with him.

Then one day we were in the Flea Pit. The Flea Pit is a cafe at the corner of Rues Pigalle and La Bruyere where the colored musicians from the States and other parts of the world hang out, when a tall, handsome Negro with the graceful build of a heavyweight champion called to us:

"What instrument do you play?"

"Oh," we replied lightly, "we play what Lord Byron called, 'the mighty instrument of little men.'"

"Never heard of that."

"The pen."

"Then, I fear you can't help," replied Wellmon, "I am trying to make up a colored orchestra to take to Biarritz."

"But," we replied, "we make the music of publicity, which sounds sweeter to some folks than even Beethoven. Tell me something about yourself and we'll write it."

"All right. Come and see me then tomorrow and I'll cook a dinner for you, myself; a reporter is like a preacher, you've got to feed him if you want to get him started right.

Once at Budapest I cooked a regular American dinner for the Consul-general and his guests—Maryland fried chicken, hot biscuits, apple pie—I served it myself and then sat down in my cook's cap and apron and played for his party, and they wouldn't believe it was I, who had cooked the dinner."

Visiting Wellmon and his charming wife the next day we found that he had not exaggerated about his skill as a cook.

After the dinner, he showed us many books filled with clippings from the dozens of countries he had visited all over the world. He has played in the leading theatres of the leading countries in Europe, except Russia, and we saw that he has appeared on the same bill with many great vaudeville actors, among them, Sir Harry Lauder.
