MARINES ENFORCE MARTIAL LAW IN PROTESTING HAITI

declared in Port au Prince and Cape Haitien Wednesday night.
The country is now reported quiet, and is patrolled by the 650 marines who have been stationed for several years.
The difficulties began when students at an agricultural school went on strike on October 31. At the time the authorities claimed that they could give no reason for the strike, which spread to other schools, even the teachers enlisting in the protest. During the past week industrial and civil employes joined the strike, which has become almost universal.
While numerous trivial reasons are given for the strike, it is well-known that it cannot be dissociated from the political unrest which had been brewing in the Republic for years. The native citizens have long protested against not being allowed to vote or have voice in the government of their Republic.
They resent the fact that no attempt has been made during the years of American occupation to prepare them for self-government while in not so far-away Porto Rico, illiterate natives are allowed to vote by symbols.
President Borno, it will be recalled, officially expressed the opinion that his countrymen were not to be trusted with the ballot to elect the head of the State.

COLOR CONTRAST
Color contrast, a highlight of the mode for grown-ups, is equally important in frocks for the junior. Chanel is one of the designers who trim dark frocks with two or more bands of contrasting color. The result is striking and decidedly new in appearance. The frock shown here has a double collar and double cuffs, in two colors. It further proclaims its adherence to the new fashions by displaying a long bodice, to which a circular skirt is attached in a series of points. The belt is placed at the natural waistline, and should match a trimming color.
