Beautiful Bride's Cake at Niagara Falls

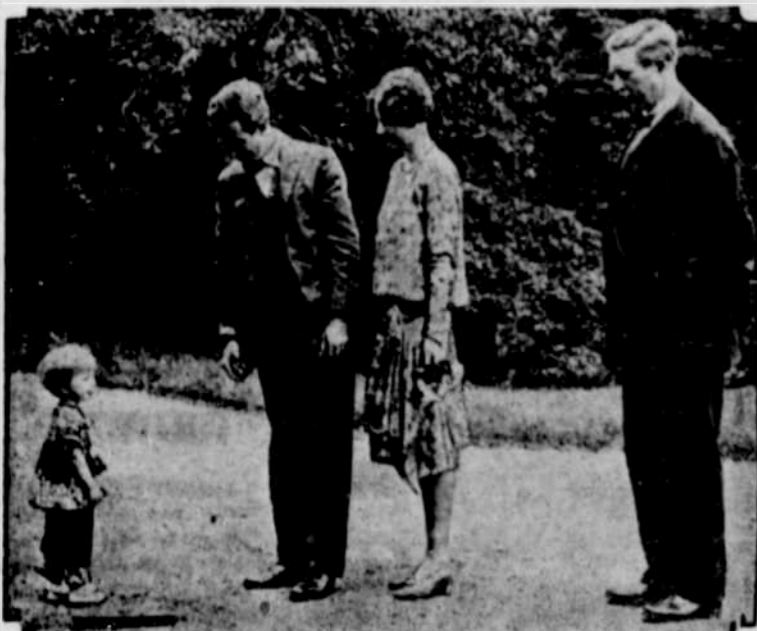

This frothy concoction is not the work of a master French chef, as might be imagined, but was created by King Winter himself in one of that gentleman's more inspired moments. The richly decorated platform is none other than the prosaic iron and concrete stand from which honeymoon couples are wont to view the wonders of Niagara falls. The swirling torrents may be seen in the background together with one of the famous suspension bridges.

Shameless Profiteer

Unjustly condemned to death for treason, by the state which he had served uprightly, Phocion, Athenian statesman, found himself also the victim of extortion in his last moments. He was to perish in the approved manner—by drinking the hemlock. He required more of the poison to make the potion effective, and asked the jailer to procure it. That grasping functionary refused the price which was offered him, and Phocion had to put in the man's outstretched palm additional money before he could take his own life as the law demanded.—Detroit News.

CONGRESS URGED TO REPEAL DRY LAW

The only action of the day, as distinguished from speechmaking, was the introduction of a joint resolution in the senate by Senator Blaine calling for the "immediate and absolute" repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. On the house side Representative F. H. La Guardia (Rep., N. Y.) had planned to present his resolution, holding the Eighteenth amendment "inoperative," because the states failed to ratify it a second time, as he contends is required by its third section.

Winning the honor of being the first to get under way with a prohibition address, Senator Blaine presented his resolution as quickly as he could get the floor after the senate convened and held it to discuss the resolution, ignoring protests that he was out of order.

President's Hoover's plan to put stronger teeth in the prohibition statutes is just one more attempt to "make people good by law," Blaine declared, "and already is doomed to failure."

"In the last nine years three Presidents have been ardent advocates of prohibition enforcement," he pointed out. "None of them succeeded in enforcement, although they had all the governmental machinery under their control and congresses that yielded to every request for more machinery of enforcement. Yet they failed."

Taking exactly the opposite point of view, Senator Sheppard opened and closed his address with the declaration that "nationwide prohibition on its tenth anniversary continues its triumphant tread." On moral, religious, humanitarian and economic grounds, he said, prohibition has justified itself and proved a blessing even beyond the dreams of its original proponents.

Productivity in the United States, home construction, purchase of automobiles, good wages, and the general prosperity of the country all attest to the benefits of prohibition, the Texas senator declared, and as proof he marshaled columns of statistics and quotations from business men.

And so the battle veered back and forth, first a wet obtaining the floor and then a dry. Representative Clancy, whose home town is Detroit, Mich., secured time enough to thoroughly lambast the Anti-Saloon league, which was holding its annual convention in Detroit, as "the most bigoted and fanatical organization in the world today, which is shamelessly claiming credit for whatever prosperity there is in the country."

As both houses adjourned after the all-day prohibition battle there was no indication that there will be any letup in the controversy. On the contrary, with the law enforcement bills soon to be grinding out of the house committees, there was every reason to predict that the row will increase rather than diminish.
