

HENPECKO GETS A DIVORCE

Story of a Sex-Crazed Virginia Girl Who Sent Her Husband to War

By ALEX FRED

Because Dave Haynes, formerly of Portsmouth, Virginia, was framed and sent to war by his pretty brown-skin wife, Mary, and her insurance agent, he will seek a divorce from her.

In 1917, when the United States began drafting men to go to war, Dave was working in the Navy Yard at Portsmouth. He was receiving $40.80 a week in wages. He carried every cent of his money home to his wife whom he loved very much.

There was nothing in the world that he wouldn't do for her. After finally David went to his wife and related what he had heard. He asked her if the things were true that he had been working for about six months or more, he began hearing rumors about his wife and the agent. David began laying off from his job to see whether the rumors were true. She in turn paid a man to watch David's movements to keep him from catching up with her. Things went on this way for some time.

She also threatened to leave him. When he again heard rumors about his wife he threatened to have the bearer of them put in jail, so that put a damper on his friends telling him anything else.

One Saturday one of David's friends called at his home on Nichols Street. David was not there, but his wife and her ofay agent were. They were in the dining room with the doors locked and the window shades down. This friend went to the side door. After knocking once, getting no response, he was in the act of leaving when he heard the man and his friend's wife talking earnestly.

"This is what he overheard from the lips of the woman:

"David ain't any good to me now. You are my daddy. I wish I could do away with him."

Her lover told her to have him put in jail for non-support. "That will hold him until I can see my friend of the War Department, who will send him to camp on a frame-up," said he. "Then we can have all our love together without bother from anyone."

"That was enough for David's friend, so he set out to find David and tell him what he had heard. But David would not believe him and threatened to have his informant put in jail.

Two weeks later David was on his way to camp. Mary didn't even tell him good bye. In fact, when David left that Monday morning, Mary went to another town to keep from seeing him.

After being twice framed, once when he was sent to the chain gang for non-support, and then drafted into the U.S. Army by his wife and her lover, David, the henpecker, learned the shameful truth about the whole thing.

After the war, David, thoroughly disillusioned, came home. He and Mary have been living apart since 1927. Now he is getting a divorce.

No "Yes" Man Wrote This

Renzi B. Lemus

The above facsimile of the "pen-fisting" of the grand president of the Brotherhood of Dining Car Employees shows that he thinks what he thinks and does what he does. Dr. Bunker says he is no "yes" man.

Mr. Renzi B. Lemus is president of the Brotherhood of Dining Car Employees. In this position he has a very great field of influence, and of acquaintance, and in addition he is widely known through the newspaper writing which he has done for years. Some time ago I asked Mr. Lemus to let me analyze his handwriting for this magazine. After I had made the analysis I sent it to him, and in reply got this letter.

"Your Grapho-Analysis of my 'pen-fisting' to hand. Many thanks. I thank you for what
