one-time ofay jailer, T. C. Budd, who hated his prisoners.

When he wanted entertainment, he lined all his prisoners up against a wall and shot at them, in order to see them run and jump.

Some mornings he came into jail and beat the blood out of the men through sheer meanness.

When they protested against the violence, he locked them up and made the cook put soap in their food, so they couldn't eat it.

I have known him to cut the food of some men off for three days at a time.

On visiting days, when prisoners' wives or mothers, brought them food, he sent them back and cursed at them.

If the prisoners would protest, they were hand-cuffed, then beaten with black-jacks.

He took the brown women up to his room, and when they would not do the things he wanted, he kicked them and slapped their faces.

Sometimes their eyes were blacked or swelled. The girls slipped letters out about the way they were treated through trustees, but they got no further than the waste basket of the city manager.

After two or three years, Old Budd was fired on that account. Then he started in the boot-legging business. This time Lady Luck turned against him, for he was caught within a year, tried and sent to jail for six months, with a fine of $500.

He tried to get a man to pull the six months for him for $500, but the judge wouldn't let it be done. He was told by that judge that he had to serve those six months if it killed him.

At that jail where he, Budd, once beat and shot at prisoners, he was made to scrub and cook, and worst of all, he was locked up by a black turnkey.
