Again Love Crashes the Color Line

Marriage of Poet Proves Again that Art and Love are Blind

Love knows no color line.

This is as true today as it was when Shakespeare penned his plays and sonnets when Elizabeth was Queen.

For in those days, the playwright wrote:

From women's eyes this doctrine I derive: They are the ground, the books, the academies, from whence doth spring the true promethean fire.

A lover's eyes will gaze on eagle blind.

A lover's ear will hear the lowest sound.

Love's feeling is more soft and sensible than are the tender horns of cockled snail.

Subtle as sphinx, as sweet and musical as bright Apollo's lute string with his hair.

And when love speaks, the voice of all the gods makes heaven drowsy with the harmony.

Never durst poet touch a pen to write until his ink were tempered with love's sighs.

O! then his lines would ravish savage ears.

And plant in tyrants mild humanity.

And that is just what Gene Toomer has done. In a nation steeped in race hatred, he has crossed the line and in the eyes of his fair bride is that light that pierces deeper than the skin and sees in her poet husband not a Negro, but a man.

Interracial unions have grown by leaps and bounds in recent years and contrary to the old belief, these unions do not spring up in the lower economic strata of life, where white men and black women and vice versa are thrown together by virtue of circumstances. The thing that tends to prove the perfect lack of logic in America's silly bugaboo is that these affinities are even more prevalent in the upper strata of society and mostly among the intelligentsia, proving that art and love have no color conscience.

Every case of recent months has been of a similar nature. Just this month, the courts of New York upheld the contentions of Mrs. Ada King, who is suing the estate of her late millionaire husband, Clarence King, of New York, for a trust fund that he left her.

The romance of Helen Lee Worthing, white, late Ziegfeld Follies beauty, and Dr. Eugene Nelson, prominent Los Angeles physician, was front page copy in the dailies of the nation for several years and their domestic life was only left alone when the wife hied herself off to New York after being harassed to desperation by obnoxious snobs.

Phil Edwards, international distance champion, one-time member of the famous New York University track team, planned to go to Oxford University after wedding Margaret Oedleshoff, the daughter of a former German government official, in New York.

The girl, who is an accomplished musician, a graduate of the Belgian Academy of Music, defied her parents and friends to marry her dark lover, and they are reported very happy together.

True Romance

Philadelphia, which, in recent years has grown more discriminatory since the influx of laborers from the South, was surprised when Miss Mathilda Yockel, white, a 33-year-old school teacher, was married to Alfred O. Hodge, also a school teacher of New York.

The young couple declared that their marriage was the outgrowth of a real love romance. The groom was a graduate of Howard University.

$15,000 Romance

The marriage of Dolores Ford, heiress to the Cincinnati pop-bottle millions, to Eugene Newton, a Harlem cabaret dancer, also caused an international stir.

So aggravated were the parents of the girl over the marriage that the father is said to have peeled $15,000 off his $50,000,000 bankroll and paid Newton to give his daughter a divorce.

Domestic Mix-up

The strange loves of another rich couple were aired in the courts at Newark, N.J., not long ago when Dr. Harold D. Canasta, white physician, accused his wife of loving their colored chauffeur while the wife in turn said that the doctor loved their colored maid.

Newspaper files are stuffed to bulging with such cases which prove conclusively that, regardless of how hard America tries to keep the bulwarks of race prejudice up, love is constantly wearing holes in the wall and romance flows through.
