THE SCOTTSDORO DECISION

The defendants failed to secure adequate representation in the original trial. On this point, the United States Supreme Court reversed, setting aside the decision of the Alabama State Supreme Court in the famous Scottsboro case, thereby passing for the first time on the question of how far the "due process" clause guarantees the individual adequate representation by counsel, and granting a new trial to seven of the nine youthful defendants charged with criminal assault.

The history of the Scottsboro case is fairly well known, not only to the American public, but people in all parts of the world have been informed to a greater or lesser degree, regarding the case.

The colored people throughout the civilized world will be cheered by the news of the Supreme Court mandate. In America, Negroes, especially those who live in the south, and in Alabama particularly, know how difficult it is for a colored man charged with a crime, to obtain a fair trial in southern courts. In fact, no matter how fair the trial might be, it is difficult for many reasons for Negroes to believe they are tried impartially at the hands of southern white courts.

The wonder is not that they did not get a fair trial in the first instance, but that they were permitted to live long enough in that mob-ridden section to get any kind of a trial.

It is common knowledge that many thousands of Negro men have been lynched charged with the "usual" crime, — rape, without a semblance of a trial. The average for the past fifty years has been 100 per year, — 5,000 men and women, lynched and burned at the stake in their own civilized country!

Fighting and wrangling back and forth between the International Labor Defense, which first entered the case, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, not only lost members and confidence of thousands to these organizations, but in the opinion of many, did much to retard the best interests of the defendants.

Both organizations seemed determined to lead — or rather — to have the exclusive conduct of the case. Neither wanted to play the "second fiddle" so to speak. So while they wrangled and called each other names (like little children) the boys' cases went wanting.

However, the International Labor Defense, retained by the defendants' kin, prevailed — raised funds, created sentiment throughout the world, and lastly, argued the case before the United States supreme tribunal.

Now, since that body has remanded the case to the Alabama courts for retrial, it is hoped that every measure will be employed to safeguard the defendants' rights when the time comes for the trial. A change of venue will most certainly be the first thing and the first move made by the defense attorneys.

Anyone knowing the facts surrounding the first trial — will certainly not believe that the boys could ever obtain a fair trial in the little town of Scottsboro. And we doubt, if anywhere in the whole state of Alabama.

IN PRAISE OF WALTER POLLAK
(From the "Scribe", Portland, Ore.)
The decision of the United States Supreme Court in ordering a new trial for the seven Negro defendants in the Scottsboro case is a heartening sign of the alertness of that august body to issues that penetrate to the very heart of social justice. It is with some gratification that we note that the attorney who argued the case before the Supreme Court was Walter Pollak, of New York, who had already distinguished himself by the services he rendered the Wickersham Commission. Jews have been prominently identified with this case since it first agitated public opinion. It is to the credit of these individuals that they joined with other liberal bodies in a demand for a fair trial for these young men who were convicted without fair trial in the bitter atmosphere of violence. Jews have ample reason to distrust the slovenly justice that is practiced in many parts of the South. Particularly when they remember the ghastly Leo Frank case of a generation ago. We like to feel that Walter Pollak symbolized the passion of American Jewry for justice, that when he pleaded eloquently and courageously before the nine members of America's highest tribunal he was representing that strain of idealism and fearless righteousness which Jews may contribute to American public life.

They say while president Hoover was speaking in Indianapolis, 8000 Negroes were marching in a democratic procession down the streets. Shades of Fred Douglas and Abraham Lincoln!

The colored voters in City, State and national government are waiting and watching to see in what manner the leaders of the democratic party will show its appreciation for the huge Negro vote cast in the recent election.

A WORD TO THE DEMOCRATS

Now that it has been monomaniacally demonstrated that the Negro no longer feels that he belongs to any particular party, the Democrats of this city and state have an unusual opportunity to show their appreciation to the Negro race. They can, by their attitude, easily encourage or discourage those of us who are inclined to support the democratic party. Every act, or deed done by the democratic party which in any way affects the Negro, will be watched with keen interest.

DEPRESSION NOT ALL TO BLAME

Idleness and unemployment which have caused a reduction in income, are not solely responsible for the awful slump in support of churches and other institutions. If members could be persuaded to pay according to their ability or in proportion to their incomes, conditions would be greatly improved. But it seems that they have, with almost unanimous consent, forgotten God. The society group still have their balls and expensive recitations. Many still eat as much and wear as expensive clothes as they ever did. In general appearance, there is no evidence of hard times. But support of the church and other worthy institutions have almost been forgotten and as a result some of them are on the verge of bankruptcy.

YOUNG MEN OF THE CITY
You, the reader of this, will help pay for a fire today!

At first glance that seems an impossible exaggeration. The chance of your home or place of business going up in smoke at a specified time is negligible. But — and here's the rub — so long as fire loss continues, you'll pay every day of your life, if you never or so much as burn a tablecloth.

The cost of fire goes into every budget. Insurance premiums are based on fire losses — therefore, every fire tends to increase, or to hold up, rates. A community's tax rate depends upon the number of properties and enterprises it has to tax — therefore, when a home or a business is destroyed, the taxes it would pay must be added to others. A percentage of fires throw men out of work and cause local industries to stop producing — and then they pay for fire in poorer business opportunities and commercial stagnation.

There are other ways in which you pay for fire, but these will serve. You might think them over next time you put off having electrical equipment inspected, or your furnace fixed, or delay until tomorrow cleaning that rubbish from the garage or basement. Fire prevention is an individual matter and can be achieved only by individual action.

Remember — you're going to pay for fire today!

SAFETY REACHES ITS MAJORITY
The organized safety movement in America is coming of age.

It was born in 1912 to combat the appalling death and accident rates then prevailing in many industries. It has since immensely expanded its usefulness so that it works not only to protect life in the factory, but in the home, on the highways, in the school — wherever the risk of accident exists.

Its achievements are its monument. Despite vastly increased industrial production, fatalities have been cut more than thirty per cent. Factory accidents which were once known as "human slaughterhouses" are now safer for the workman than is his home. Accidental deaths to children have been cut through the introduction of safety education into school curriculums.

The number of children injured or killed by automobiles has dropped markedly — but the adult toll of automobiles has jumped at a dizzy rate. In this last field the safety movement has met its greatest obstacle. The highways are thronged with irresponsible, incompetent and reckless drivers that last year claimed 34,000 lives and were responsible for hundreds of thousands of accidents. Safety on the highway can come only when automobile operators — like factory workers and executives — realize their responsibility and become "safety conscious". Then organized safety movement will have conquered its greatest enemy.

REV. W. R. LOVELL
Rev. Walter Raleigh Lovell, former pastor of the First A. M. E. Zion Church of Portland closed his fifth year here recently and was promoted by the bishop to the Presiding Eldership of the California conference.

While in Portland, Rev. Lovell's administration remodelled the church and erected a modern parsonage at the cost of $6,900.

Rev. Lovell is a talented and highly educated man. His idealism carries him to high realms. Having been a professor in school, he possesses an analytic mind that made him valuable in many ways to the community.

Unfortunately the material with which he had to work was so limited that his work did not stand out like that of some others, no doubt, much less gifted. The people did not fully appreciate him and the sacrifices he and his splendid companion made to serve them and the community.

However, that is in the past and we hope that his successor may have a better and larger support and that Reverend Lovell will have the hearty, cheerful cooperation of the people he will serve as presiding elder throughout his district.

THE ELECTION AFTERMATH

To the editor:
Well, the election is a thing of the past and so are the republicans. I don't think they even got their breeches left. Seem as though the democrats deeded that they wanted the whole hog or none and proceeded to take it all. The only mark the republicans have is the one marked "exit only".

They say a change of pastures makes fat cows, but I hope they won't have to get fat by eating the grass that is supposed to grow in the streets of the cities when the democrats get in. If they do, perhaps they can quench their thirst with good old beer that will soon be here. That ought to be some consolation. The vote on the repeal shows that the forgotten man has at last awakened to the fact that this prohibition farce has gone far enough and the time is ripe for them to use some common sense.

There is a good chance that this change may bring about a return of good times, but it is useless to think that the unemployed will be put back to work in the next month or so. It will take time and plenty of it to readjust conditions now existing in this land of ours. So don't commit suicide but let God and the democratic party work it out in their own good time and way.

No one should envy Mr. Roosevelt his job as I know these American people six months from the day he is inducted into office, will be cursing him and his administration. — Just like they did Mr. Hoover. You can't please them all and those you don't please are sure to let the world know what he thinks of you.

We all, no doubt, will agree that conditions are bad, but they could be worse. But just suppose you or I had the job to bring the country back to the main line. That is what Mr. Roosevelt is hired to do and we all should pitch in and help him do it. So cheer up and stop "draping the crepe".

Thanksgiving Proclamation MADE BY GOVERNOR MEIER

"The turn of the year brings us again to our annual day of thanksgiving, which has continued as an established American institution throughout the life of our nation. As we draw near to this day, which is a heritage from the Pilgrim fathers, let us give thought to that dauntless little band who, midst peril and hardship, and facing a future filled with unknown dangers, thanked God for life, for freedom and for opportunity. They prayed, not that their path might be made easy, but that they might have divine guidance and strength to endure.

Let us approach our thanksgiving festival in the spirit of the founders, thanking God for the abundant gifts of fruitful nature and ingenious science, and bidding Him to give us wisdom and understanding in our stewardship so that suffering and want shall be banished from our great land.

Now, therefore, I, Julius L. Meier, governor of the state of Oregon, in conformity of the proclamation of the president of the United States, do proclaim Thursday, Nov. 24, 1932, as Thanksgiving day, and do hereby set it aside as a public holiday.

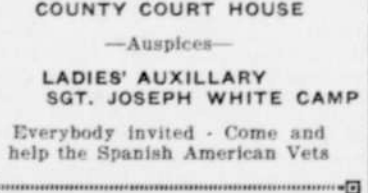

Let us, on this day, give thanks to God for the fulfillment of His ancient promise that while the earth remains, seed time and the harvest shall not fail. Let us acknowledge the ties of family affection and renew the bond of hearth and home. Let us confide and strengthen the will to peace and brotherhood. Let us give cheerful and generous aid to those who are in sorrow or need, and let us reverently seek the guidance of our Almighty God in the service of mankind."

DISCOURAGEMENT

Discouragement is a disease. More people are suffering from this ailment at this time than ever before. We are being tested every day to see what we are made of. Negative qualities that appear from all sides have a tendency to make the strong stronger, and the weak, weaker, so we must not be disheartened or weak by discouragement, but keep on putting forth every effort to get results. Results only appear where effort and a positive thought have been put into effect. NANCY LEE

BIRTH CONTROL CRYING NEED FO NEGRO SAYS MEDIC

Scores Institutions For Not Giving Informative Contraceptives
New York, Nov. 11—That American Negroes stand greatly in need of knowledge how to limit their offspring, is the statement of Dr. Charles H. Garvin, writing in the November issue of the Birth Control Review. An advance copy of the article has been sent out. Dr. Garvin cites the high infant mortality among Negro babies as showing the need for fewer children with better opportunity for those brought into the world. "My apital is not for the reduction of America's black population," he writes, "but I am vitally interested in increasing racial stamina by the reduction of the unfit. Fewer and stronger babies, high-quality, low-quantity production. The birth and death rates among Negroes is appalling. Few racial groups show such a high birth rate with a correspondingly tremendous and distressing infant mortality rate. "Infant mortality is highest among the children of the poverty-stricken, the underfed and badly housed, where vice, degeneracy, alcoholism, crime, and tuberculosis thrive. It increases in direct ratio to the size of the family." In default of information on contraception which they should have, Negro women are resorting to criminal abortions which, Dr. Garvin reports, are definitely increasing. Dr. Garvin criticizes the "sluggishness" of Negro medical institutions in considering birth control methods and says: "Just why our two medical colleges have been so reluctant to offer scientific teaching in the face of the dyadic practices of the Negro, is most perplexing to me. The situation is tragic and the responsibility of the Negro physician is clear."

NEGRO WOMAN NAMED AS A PARTICIPANT IN MERRILL SLAYING

Natchez, Miss., Nov. 17—A colored woman, Emily Burns, was indicted on two counts in the "goat fund" slaying of Jane Sured Merrill, aristocrat of the Old South, by a grand jury here Wednesday, authorities of officially reported. Miss Merrill was slain August 4 in her 120-year-old mansion, Glen Burney, to which she retired to seclusion 40 years ago and to which the doors were barred to all except her childhood sweetheart, Duncan Minor. The colored woman was reported indicted on one count charging participation with George Pearls, colored in the actual slaying, and on another with aiding Pearls to escape. Pearls was killed while resisting arrest.

The grand jury was reported considering indictments against Richard Dana, kinsman of the novelist, Charles Dana, and his housekeeper, Miss Octavia Dockery, daughter of a famous confederate general. Dana and Miss Dockery are at liberty under bond on charges of murdering Miss Merrill, allegedly as the result of a feud that started when trespassing on property belonging to Miss Merrill.

KEEPING -FIT-

By De Norval Unthank, M. D.

The death rate of the Negro from tuberculosis is approximately two and one half times as great among Negroes as among whites in the United States. This rate is alarmingly high when considered comparatively. For example in 1910, deaths among whites in the United States registration area was 129 per 100,000 population as compared to 463 among Negroes. In 1927 the rates were 59 per 100,000 for the whites and 193 for the Negroes. Thus the decline among Negroes is as hopefully declining as the rate among whites.

The vast decline among Negroes can only be accounted for in the fact that since 1910 special effort has been made to combat tuberculosis among Negroes. Provisions have been made for sanatorium treatment, for general education of the public — especially the school children in general and personal hygiene and a general improvement in the economic status showing itself in improved food, clothing and housing conditions.

The decline in the death rate from tuberculosis is less in the cities where there are congested centers of Negro population. The death rate in cities among Negroes is more than one and one half times greater than Negro death rate in rural areas.

Careful study of these urban conditions is bringing to light more and more that the exorbitant rates of tuberculosis and poor housing conditions Negro in these communities. It is how shall these problems best be organized are taking a part. However the great impetus of the movement should rest upon the Negro himself. Not until this impetus comes from within our own group shall we get anywhere toward the solution of these problems. Here is an outlet for much of the unrest and dissatisfaction that is present in the church today.
