NAZIS AND NOSES

"Women with their faces powdered or rouged no longer will be permitted to attend Nazi demonstrations in Breslau. News Dispatch from Berlin. . . Always get out of the plane looking fresh and fit. Never look as though you need powder on your nose."—Amy Johnson, the Aviator.

It is a mistake to presume that the seemingly eccentric ways of the female species is an incurable vanity. It is, at its source, an inborn love of the beautiful. That quality of mind is more inherently a part of her personality than any outward show of vanity, which in any event is nothing more than a glow of a light whose source is deeper and more enduring than any surface indications as powdering the nose.

Men have always been inclined to tell women what to do about their dress and appearance. This assumption on their part is nothing if not an incurable vanity, mixed with the very sum and substance of arrogance. Women keep on doing as they please about their personal adornment. In their new roles they always appear shocking to the male until the novelty of it is worn off, then they look beautiful, and about that time the female is ready for another rude awakening, and so it has always been.

In the meanwhile the male is so inarticulate, ultra conservative, if not positively crude, that he continues to wear stiff bosom shirts, high collars and tons of other unnecessary heavy apparel, proving that he is foolish as well as a glutton for punishment. He will slowly evolve into an animal that will shelve, but he will without scruple dare to stick his shiny, unpowdered beak into the business of women. Women need no brief in their behalf to the cosmetics philosophy of Amy Johnson as against any dictator or government that would attempt to tread on the inviolable rights of the female who so diligently searches out and finds so many alluring, lovely and ever exquisite ways to charm the male filled with the deliriums and joyful dumps created for the most part, by male dullards and dumbbells. They should have sufficient historic perspective to know that the Potiphar kings of ancient Egypt, as well as some of the Caesars of Rome, tried their hand in trying to keep the women from powdering their noses and all they got out of it was a new enlightenment on the niceties and limitations of royal prerogatives. But even experience is a poor teacher to boneheads.

We don't mean to be offensive, unnecessarily, to the male species; we really think of some merit; we only are impelled to say something mean, if possible, about Adolf Hitler.

WELCOME

This week brings to Portland delegates to the district conference at Zion church and the annual conference at Bethel. Portland is highly honored to be the host for these worthy events, and is certain to make the stay of the delegates very enjoyable. The Advocate extends a hearty greeting to all who are visiting our city in attendance at these conferences and will be glad to do anything in our power to make these events a success.

MAKING GOOD

The Colored man may not receive his just deserts in any fields of activity, but we do feel that there is one avenue that tends to play fair with him, it is the athletic world. We saw that Toian and Metcalf had proven that they were the best in the United States in their particular events, and so were allowed to represent the United States in the Olympic Games. Right here in Portland in the boxing ring two of our boys, Andy Bundy and Young Peter Jackson, have distinguished themselves as great boxers and so consequently they are being given every opportunity to go ahead and make good. On the 22nd of this month fights in the main event in Multnomah Stadium. We wish him luck and hope to see a large crowd out to cheer him.

N I R A

All businesses have been watching the operation of the National Recovery Administration with vast interest. No government bureau has ever had such dominance over trade practices, wages, hours of work, working conditions production, etc. The purpose of the National Industrial Recovery Act according to its originators is two-fold: to standardize wages and to relieve unemployment. It is of particular interest how the NRA is affecting the Negro. Nothing definite can be said at this time. However, there seems to be conflicting views on this matter: Alton Hosely, president of the National Negro Business League and also president of the National C. M. A. stores thinks that the NRA with its specific demands for exact bookkeeping and systematization will be a boon to the Negro and especially to the Negro business man. But the Oklahoma Eagle comes out with an editorial decrying the NRA and stating that the main thing it is doing to the Negro is

WITH OUR 1933 LEGISLATURE
—By—
ASHBY C. DICKSON
State Senator and former Circuit Multnomah County

I shall continue this week discussing further the bills passed by the last legislature and voted by the governor. After the Joint Ways and Means Committee had about exhausted themselves with the study of the finances of this state, the committee proceeded to introduce a lot of bills covering the expenses for the operation of the government for the next two years, and that committee introduced H. B. number 571 in which it was provided that, in addition to the appropriations granted to the office of the state treasurer, under the provisions of H. B. 489, there is hereby appropriated out of the general moneys in the general fund of the state treasurer and sum of $1000 or so much thereof as may be necessary for the payment of the general expenses, operating expenses, and maintenance of the office of the state treasurer, and the emergency clause was attached to the bill so that the state treasurer's office would have the sum of $1090 immediately available; after the governor appended his signature to the bill, it at all.

And by the way, the Emergency clause may be somewhat of a little new to my listeners, and I am going to read a copy of the Emergency clause for your benefit. "It is hereby adjudged and declared that existing conditions are such that this act is necessary for the immediate preservation of public peace, health and safety; and owing to the urgent necessity of maintaining the public credit, an emergency is hereby declared to exist, and this act shall take effect and be in full force and effect from and after its passage and approval by the governor."

I do not remember the arguments put forth in the Senate in favor of that bill, but in any event, our good treasurer, Mr. Rufus Holman apparently needed $1000 and needed it quick, so the Joint Committee on Ways and Means evidently thought the preservation of public peace, health and safety was at stake and attached the emergency clause, but when the governor had the bill laid before him there probably rested in his mind a recollection of the accusations of extravagance, mismanagement and waste that had been made about him by our good state treasurer that led to the issuance of the emergency clause, but other words, Julius evidently thought Rufus had all that was coming to him when the Ways and Means Committee appropriated $43,523 of the taxpayers' money to run the state treasurer's office. Let no one of you, my friends, understand that I am taking sides or refer to this vendetta that exists between his Excellency, the Governor, and the Grand Eschequer of the Treasury Department. That is their private fight.

Prior to the convening of the legislative assembly, we had almost as much talk about scrip as we did about beer. Beer got by, but the scrip fell by the wayside insofar as the governor was concerned. Both Houses of the legislature passed H. B. 576 which provided that "The governing bodies of the state, counties and incorporated cities are hereby authorized and empowered jointly or severally to issue scrip as a means of providing employment relief, the amount of such scrip to be issued shall not be in excess of the amount estimated by such governing bodies as being necessary to provide adequate relief for the unemployment."

The tax collecting agencies of the state counties and incorporated cities were authorized to accept legally issued scrip for their respective tax-delinquent taxes, and another one of those emergency clauses that had to do with the public peace, health and safety was appended to that bill, but when it called to the governor's desk, he had different views on the scrip business and promptly applied the veto ax.

Some of our good citizens set out after the adjournment of the legislature, to provide a method of issuing city-county scrip for Portland and Multnomah County, and I am informed that a great deal of good is being accomplished by that program.

WATER POWER
During the 1931 session of the legislature, a bill providing for "An act to conserve the water power resources of the state of Oregon, to provide for the use and development thereof, for the generation of electricity by associations of citizens and private corporations and the appropriation of $50,000 for the purpose of paying general expenses, operating expenses, maintenance expenses, and capital outlay of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Oregon" was introduced and enacted into law; the Joint Ways and Means Committee of the last session introduced H. B. 594 transferring all, or any part of the $50,000 not yet expended "back to the general fund. This bill passed both houses and when it arrived at the governor's desk, he promptly vetoed it. I assume that he was reminded and had a recollection of his campaign promises of 1930 concerning public ownership of hydro electric power plants, so that appropriation or any part of it that is left, still remains and is available for the uses and purposes for which

It was originally intended.
MAIN DISH SALADS
This is the season for chilled dishes and on very warm days it is permissible to make exceptions to the usual routine of menu planning and to serve the protein or main dish in the form of a salad. To most of us, a salad consists usually of chopped vegetables, preferably green vegetables, plus a dressing made especially for it. Fresh fruits served with a generous portion of crisp lettuce are also suitable salad ingredients.

But on the very warm days exceptions are made their meat, eggs and cheeses of all kinds may parade to the table as salads. To accompany this type of salad, carrot sticks, celery or sliced tomatoes are served along with a pitcher of cold milk or a tempting milk shake for everyone. Instead of fried chicken for your Sunday dinner, try this delicious chicken salad. It will be much cooler both for the cook and for the family.

One of the bills that caused about as much argument and debate and was lobbied for and against about as much as any bill introduced would acquire was senate bill number 160. This bill provided that no city or any officer of agent shall have authority to degrade or bar any milk for sale within this city on the ground that the same failed to conform to the grades established by and in force in this city, except as was provided for in the bill. It was claimed by some of the farmers and dairymen who had been selling milk in Portland that frequently the milk inspectors arbitrarily degraded their milk without a hearing and pending the time that they would acquire large quantities of milk without an avenue for its disposal and as a result suffered a severe hardship; this bill was intended to relieve the situation.

The provision of the bill that the farmers urged, was that notice of proposal to degrade their milk, or to bar the same from sale within such city, shall be served upon the producer, who may within three days demand that the controversy be submitted to a board of arbitration, one member of the board to be chosen by the producer, one member by the officer charged with the administration of the law, and these two to choose a third, and within three days after the board of arbitration had chosen they should render a decision as to whether or not the milk should be degraded or barred from sale within the city on the ground that it failed to conform to the regulations, in force in such city. The decision of any two arbitrators would be binding.

It seemed to me that this was a very just and fair way to settle a controversy and I lent my support to that bill. It passed the Senate unanimously and I believe passed the House with only four or five dissenting votes, but when it reached the governor's office, it ran afoul of the veto ax.

On or before February 1 of each year each civil subdivision in the state either through the irrigation or drainage district or school district of the second or third class shall file with the state treasurer a true copy of its budget as fully adopted.

And for the purpose of carrying into effect this act, the sum of $25,000 was appropriated to defray the costs of examinations of clerical, traveling and incidental expense, and the emergency clause was attached to this bill after it passed both Houses, the governor vetoed it.

"REVEALING"

YOUR PAST PRESENT FUTURE

BY

ABBIE WALLACE

(Youngest Mentalist on the American Stage Today)

H.M. Must I keep on living with him I foresee obstacles of many natures to for my children's sake or shall I leave? confront you.

ANS: Your sacrifice is not helping your children any and inasmuch as it is only a matter of time before your useless husband leaves you, I suggest you act first.

G.N.L. I bought some land in 1909. Will it be worth anything to me?

ANS: The land you own in Texas will never increase in value and you will do well if you can realize at the money you sunk into it.

R.W.W. Am I under suspicion for the theft that took place where I work?

ANS: Yes and I suggest that you return the money, your failure to do so will mean no end of trouble for you.

D.B. Dear Doctor Abbe' I am in trouble. Will he stick by me till it is over?

ANS: One experience before has not taught you a lesson and as you fear your boy friend is making plans to leave town already—if you wish to go through it again—file the charge against him.

S.V.M. My Aunt wants me to move to her home. Will I be happy there if I do or will I wind up like I did at my Brother's?

ANS: I see you making a trip to your Aunt at Dublin, Georgia and it will spell a great social change for you. Your future husband awaits you there.

D.L.P. Would I get by with it without any trouble?

ANS: Your plan would be pure folly.
