Mrs. Silas J. Day left last Sunday for a visit with Portland friends and she may decide to remain in that city and attend the meeting, June 17th, of the Oregon Pioneers. McGee, who took up a claim on Rogue river in 1853 near the present Bybee bridge, but he was driven off by the Indians and he returned to the Willamette Valley, and in after years he moved to Walla Walla where he now resides. At the close of the Indian war, Rev. McGee's claim was taken up by John B. Risley and at present it is owned by A. L. Dickinson. At the time that Rev. McGee took up his claim he was operating a grist mill at Salem, at which place his family resided. In the interims of milling business he did missionary work in the services of the M. E. church with zeal and perseverance for which the early missionaries were noted.

Baseball Notes.

By a successful combination of brilliant playing, good luck and lusty rooting Jacksonville succeeded in all but scoring a shut out on Ashland last Sunday afternoon on their home grounds. The day was a great one for ball players, and it was unfortunate that there was not a larger crowd in attendance for the game was one of the neatest combats ever waged by strictly amateur talent on the Jacksonville grounds.

Game was called promptly at 2 o'clock with K. K. Kubli as umpire, Jacksonville at the bat and Capt. Hathaway energetically pacing the side-lines and his eye on every move of his men. Fast ball was played from the start. Donegan, the local pitcher, was in good form and though he fanned fewer men than did Robley the hits off his slants resulted only in little fly balls popped out to the fielders who were generally there. Robley did good work in the box but was poorly assisted. Jacksonville, however, played good ball all around, and though a few bad errors were made, adroit base stealing and some fine work at critical moments made the victory an easy one.

Line up:

Ashland	Position	Player	Jacksoville	Position	Player
Miller	c	Ulrich	Robley	p	Donegan P
Closser	1b	Orth	Eastman	2b	Donegan R
Sayles	3b	McGill	Neil	ss	Nunan
Carter	lf	Donegan Ed	Bowers	cf	Finney
Marksbury	rf	Muller

Wednesday's game at Ashland proved a Waterloo for the local team. Jacksonville's line up was practically the same as in Sunday's game, while Ashland was materially strengthened by the placing of Engle on first and Pool on second base. Game was called in the presence of a good crowd. Donegan had not expected to pitch, and was suddenly placed in the box without any preparatory warming up and as a consequence Ashland's first five men up scored four tallies and right there won the game before Donegan's twirler could steam up for business. After the first inning the game settled down to hard playing on both sides, though Ashland was steady enough to retain the lead throughout.

Score:

Jacksoville	0	0	0	0	2	0	0	1-5
Ashland	4	0	0	0	2	2	0	8

The Medford baseball nine suffered defeat at the hands of Gold Hill team last Sunday on the grounds of the latter by a score of 11 to 3.

Lee Cranfil, Walter Walrad, Geo. Hargadine, Grover Neil, Thos. Prathor, W. H. Mowat and Amos Niningger were among the Ashland enthusiasts who attended Sunday's game in this city.

The game next Sunday will be between Grants Pass and the local team. It promises to be a hot contest and a good crowd is expected.
