Tuesday night at 10 o'clock the barn of J. A. Marsh was discovered to be on fire and an alarm of fire was immediately turned in to which the fire company promptly responded but the barn being a small structure and having some hay in it flamed up like a big torch and nothing could be done to save it, even had the firemen been able to reach it with their hose, which they could not as it was five blocks from the nearest cistern. The fire quickly spread to a small barn in the adjoining lot owned by the Krause estate and it too was destroyed. Mr. Marsh's loss was about $150 and no insurance and the other barn was a loss of about $50. The fire was incendiary as the circumstantial evidence clearly proves.

Prof. E. E. Washburn arrived in Jacksonville Tuesday and is here this week assisting Supt. P. H. Daily on the examination board for teachers. Mrs. Washburn is in Ashland, and Prof. Washburn will return there, and they will remain in that place with relatives until they can have possession of their house now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Gus Newbury, which will be in about two weeks, when they will again take up their residence in Jacksonville. Prof. Washburn reports that he and Mrs. Washburn had a delightful time while in California this summer. They visited all the principal points of interest about San Francisco and the adjoining towns on the bay. They also visited Stanford University and the famous Lick Observatory. The summer school of six weeks at the State University at Berkeley, and which Prof. Washburn attended, had over 1200 students in attendance and the instructors were professors from the great Eastern colleges, principally from Harvard, Yale and Cornell. Instructions were given in nearly every branch of learning, but Prof. Washburn only took such studies as would be of special use to him in his school.
