A Leader of Magazines.

The magazine that is indispensable in a Presidential year, the America Monthly Review of Reviews, is living up to its well-earned reputation. The issue for July is strong in political articles of wide and timely interest. "Theodore Roosevelt as a Presidential Candidate" is considered in graphic, trenchant style, yet with dignity as benefits the subject, by one of the delegates to the Chicago convention. The article is profusely illustrated with pictures of the President and his family. Then there is the major part of the speech of Hon. Root, of New York, temporary chairman of the convention, presenting the record of the Republican party from 1901 to 1904. In "The Progress of the World," Dr. Albert Shaw reviews the political history of the past four years in the United States, discusses men and policies, and "round up" the situation in his own convincing and informing style, bringing the reader up to the Democratic Convention at St. Louis—which will be handled in the August number of the Review. This department is copiously illustrated. A group of three short, well illustrated articles show what the national government is doing in the way of health and sanitation on a large scale. Col. William C. Goegas, of the Medical Corps, U. S. A., who will have charge of Government's sanitary work on the Isthmus of Panama during the construction of the canal, writes on "Solving the Health Problem at Panama." "The Porto Rican Government's Fight with Anemia" is described by Adam C. Haeselbarth, and "Government Care of Consumptives" at Fort Stanton New Mexico is told by Oliver P. Newman. William E. Smythe, author of "The Conquest of Arid America" and other works on irrigation, considers the entire problem of the reclamation of arid lands, under the title "Triumph of National Irrigation." The war situation in the far East is presented and interesting side-lights are thrown upon it by Park Benjamin's discussion of "Battleships, Mines, and Torpedoes," helpfully illustrated with diagrams, by the sketch and portrait of Prince Esper Ukhtomsky, the Russian editor-statesman who has just made a tour of the United States and by the illustrated article on "What the People Read in Poland and Finland." Many Americans will be surprised at Canada's commercial expansion, as outlined by Mr. P. T. McGrath, who presents a graphic picture, which is supplemented by a railroad map. Besides these, there are the regular departments Record of Current Events," "Current History in Cartoons," "Leading Articles of the Month," "Current History in Cartoons," "Leading Articles of the Month" and "New Books." The noteworthy features of the cartoons for July are pages of Japanese and Russian popular cartoons, from original sources. The book department is also very full and copiously illustrated with portraits of authors of "Summer Reading."
