

PRESERVING FRUIT

Some Interesting Facts Concerning the Preservation of Fruit For Exhibition Purposes and of Interest To All Fruit-Growers.

SECURED AT ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION

At different times in the past The Fruit-Grower has published formulas which are used for preserving fruits in liquids, for exhibition purposes. At the World's Fair recently the gentlemen in charge of the Canadian exhibit gave us the formulas which have been used in preparing the very attractive exhibit of that country. The exhibits in jars from Canada, it may be said, have perhaps better color than any of the jars shown from other states. It seems that the Canadians have been making a special study of this matter, and the results attained are very satisfactory. Several different solutions are used, as follows:

Formalin solution—Distilled water (or any perfectly clear water will do), 44 pounds; formalin, 1 pound; alcohol, 5 pints.

Boric Acid Solution—Dissolve one pound of boric acid in 45 pounds of clear water; agitate until thoroughly dissolved, then add five pints of alcohol. If the fluid is not clear, allow it to stand and settle, when the clear upper portion may be poured off and the remainder filtered. This solution and the one given above are used for berries and dark colored fruits.

Zinc Chloride Solution—(For white, yellow and green fruits, and especially for vegetables)—Dissolve one-half pound of zinc chloride in fifteen pounds of water; agitate until dissolved, then add one and two-thirds pints of alcohol; allow this to stand until settled, then pour off the clear portion and filter the remainder.

Sulphurous Acid Solution—Sulphurous acid, 1 pint; water 8 pints; alcohol, 1 pint.

In the Canadian exhibit will be found fruits and vegetables preserved by all these solutions, and anyone who is interested in matters of this kind can study the exhibit with profit.—Western Fruit-Grower.

From Flapjacks and Beans to Fricasseed Chicken.

The following miner's story from the Mining World, of Chicago, will be appreciated by many a Southern Oregon prospector, who, when good luck came his way, quickly changed the rough and sometimes scanty fare of the prospector's table to the toothsome dishes that in fancy he dined on as he delved in the earth for the gold that was to make realities of his dreams:

A mine sale had just been made. The sellers comprised several prospector partners who had roughed it together for many years in a wild country far removed from all the comforts and luxuries of civilization. The boys divided a handsome stake. The question arose as to what the several partners would do with their money.

One was going to make a trip to the old country to see the folks he had left years before. Another was going to buy a ranch and another was going to reside in the city where he could enjoy life and see the sights which money he knew would disclose to his vision.

One of them, an old fellow, had crude ideas of the value of money and of the luxuries of life. He was asked what he intended to do. He thought for awhile; he thought of flapjacks and sowbelly, and he thought of the days when the rough fare had been changed for the better, perhaps with the scraping of butter or the opening of a can of peaches. Those days were the happy events he had with pleasure looked back upon in the more recent years of his monotonous life. They had been the cream of his existence.

"Guess about the first thing I'll do," said he, "will be to get a good square meal, the best that money can buy."

He was asked where he would secure this meal and what he would order when the waiter came to his table.

"Where'll I go?" said he. "Why, I'll make a bee-line for the Waldorff-Astoria or some other of those swell joints in New York city, and when the waiter wants my order, I'll just tell him to bring me—dura it, I'll order the best plate of ham and eggs he's got in the shop."

And one has to be away from ham and eggs, roughing it in the mountains for some time, to appreciate fully just how good tastes a dish as ordinary as this.

Change of Owners.

On Saturday the final payment of $3000 was made to A. H. Carson, whereby Foster & Gunell, become the owners of 57½ acres of mining ground on Oscar Creek. This is a valuable piece of property lying immediately below the famous Oscar creek placers owned by Jewell & Hayer. A consolidation of the properties is among the possibilities as such a combination would greatly facilitate the operations and make possible much more systematic and efficient work.—Grants Pass Courier.

The Mr. Foster above mentioned is H. E. Foster manager of the Oregon Bell mine, on Forest creek, which is now under course of development, Manager Foster working a day and night shift of men and operating two Burleigh drills and a compressor plant.

Card of Thanks.

Having received so many kindnesses from the citizens of Jacksonville, Klamath Falls and Bonanza during the time that our sons Floyd and Daniel were stricken by severe accidents we take this means of showing our heartfelt appreciation and of thanking them and we shall ever hold them in grateful remembrance for the generous assistance that came unsolicited yet was so much appreciated by us.

Quartz and placer location blanks for sale at the Sentinel Office.

Mrs. H. V. Helms returned Monday from Portland, where she had spent six weeks with her daughters in that city.

Miss Gertrude Dunnington went to Yreka Saturday to spend a week with friends in that place. She was accompanied as far as Ashland by Miss Emma Wulf who spent the day in that town with friends.

E. P. Vicroy, who owns a 300 acre tract of fine stock and mining land on Forest creek, was in Jacksonville Monday. Mr. Vicroy is one of the pioneers of this county and is taking life easy and for the past five years has had his place rented to W. T. Bostwick who has it for the coming year. Mr. Bostwick attends to the farm work during the summer months and during the winter season operates the placer mine that is on the place. He has a giant fed by an eight-inch pipe and a good head of water for from four to five months each winter.

Proof that Gold Hill is pushing ahead as one of the progressive, prosperous towns of Rogue River Valley is had in the fact that the town now has a bank, and which opened its doors for business Tuesday in the handsome brick building just completed for its use. J. L. Hammersly, is the cashier and J. E. Enyard, cashier of the Medford Bank of Medford is president and Horace Pelton, of Pelton Bros. the well known Sams Valley stockmen, is vice-president. Mr. Hammersly is a man of restless energy and of many duties and in addition to being cashier of the bank of Gold Hill, he is the town postmaster and a successful attorney. The plan of the bank building was arranged to accommodate Mr. Hammersly in the discharge of his many duties. The building has four rooms, of the two front rooms one is for the bank and the other is for the postoffice and the two rear rooms one is for the private bank office and the other is Mr. Hammersly's law office. Mr. Hammersly devotes but little of his time to the postoffice that work being handled to the satisfaction of the patrons of the office by Mrs. Hammersly, who assists her husband in much of his office work. The bank starts out with encouraging prospects and having ample capital at its command will doubtless do a large and profitable business.

SPRAINS.

S. A. Read, Cisco, Texas, writes, March 11th, 1901: "My wrist was sprained so badly by a fall that it was useless; and after using several remedies that failed to give relief, used Ballard's Snow Lintment and was cured. I earnestly recommend it to any one suffering from sprains." 25c, 50c, $1.00. For sale by City Drug Store.
