

RELIEVED OF MONEY

Medford the Scene of a Robbery In Which a Klamath County Man Loses a Nice, Little Bunch of "The Root of All Evil."

AND A NUMBER OF OTHER ITEMS

T. Mills and two fallen women calling themselves Sadie Smith and Mabel Sessions were arrested by Special Constable Howard charged with robbing a tender-foot from east of the mountains of $380, and taken to the county jail.

The complaint alleges that he went to a house in West Medford occupied by the parties, in an inebriated condition, and while there he was "touched" for the money, which he had in a coin sack pinned in one of his pantaloons' pockets.

One of the women was subsequently discharged and the other defendants had an examination in Justice Stewart's court Dec. 28th. Several hours were spent in examining witnesses, District Attorney Reames appearing for the prosecution and W. M. Colvig representing the defense.

Mills and his companions were held to answer at the next term of circuit court the former's bond being placed at $1000 and the latter's at $500. In default thereof they were remanded to the custody of the sheriff.—Southern Oregonian.

This Hobo Had Wealth.

The eyes of several men in Recorder Berry's office bulged out with surprise this morning at the revelation of unexpected wealth on the person of a tourist, who had just been brought in by Chief of Police Eglin says the Ashland Tidings. Earlier in the morning a telephone call was sent to the Chief of Police from the home of G. W. Canning, on Sixth street, between A and B street. Mr. Canning's son had gone to the barn, where he found a Weary Willie with his pockets full of oranges, and ordered him to get out. The man replied by telling the boy he "would kill him with an ax," and the latter made all haste to call the officer. Eglin found the man behind the freight depot eating his oranges and brought him up town. When searched, besides three or four pairs of overalls he was wearing and some tin cans strapped to his shoulder, he had the sum of $370.15, which he declared he had worked for and come by honestly.
