NEW SHORT STORIES

Not Careful to Whom They Spoke. Nat M. Wills returned to Broadway last week after an absence of several months, and the street certainly did look good to him. So did the shops, the hotels, the restaurants, the lights and the people. He walked out of the Knickerbocker building and stood in front of it for a moment looking up and down the busy way. A smooth faced, well groomed fellow stood at his elbow and seemed to be also drinking in the tone of the street.

"Looks good, doesn't it?" said the stranger.

"Certainly does," replied Nat. "How long have you been away?"

"Three years," was the answer in a tone that rang of sadness.

"Oh, I've got you beat!" said Wills. "I've only been away three months."

Just then a central office man touched Wills on the elbow and nodded for him to come aside.

"Know who that is?" asked the detective.

"No," replied Wills.

"Big Frank," one of the cleverest thieves out of prison. He's just finished three years in Joliet, and I've been trailing him."

"Gee, that looks bad for me! Glad none of my friends saw me. Guess I'll be moving along," and Wills hurried up the street.

"Who was that fellow, Tom?" asked the confidence man as Wills moved away.

"Nat Wills, the actor," replied the detective.

"An actor? Well, what do you think of that? I hope none of my friends saw me. Guess I'll get away before he comes back and borrows ten."

"I must have lost my sight in Joliet," and "Big Frank" hurried away in an opposite direction.

"Queer folks," sottoliquized the detective as he again took the trail—New York American.

The Cook's Mistake.

Asher Hinds of Portland, Me., the expert parliamentarian of the national house, has long and carefully studied the markets of the capital city with reference to fruit, plants and vegetables that are good for man to eat. He measured them all by the standards of the Pine Tree State and concluded that the Maine equivalent of everything except squash flourished in this latitude.

When he started south in September he arranged to have a few barrels of that raw material for pies shipped to his Washington address. In engaging a family cook an affirmative answer was insisted upon for this question, "Can you make good squash pie?"

At last a cook meeting the usual requirements was found, and to the special query about squash pies she replied with great confidence:

"Lo! bless me, Mister Hinds, I suah knows how ter make dem pies."

The domestic establishment speedily settled down to normal, and the express wagon rolled up to the door one morning with a load of the best Cumberland county squashes. Due preparations were made, and the house parliamentarian descended Capitol hill and ascended Washington heights to his residence with an assurance that at last his table would be supplied with everything as good as in Maine.

But the pie was served with a heavy pastry crust on top, and now there is a vacancy for a cook who knows better.—Boston Herald.

The New Statesman.

The new congressman is always a joy in his verdant innocence, but Foulkrod of Philadelphia holds the palm this year, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. He was talking in the Willard the other night about the drawing of seats by lot which was to take place in the house the next day.

"I hope I shall not get a front seat," he said anxiously.

"It must be very annoying," he said, "to the speaker to have a member get up and leave the room during the proceedings of the house, and some day I might have to, you know."

Foulkrod's fear is the first of the kind heard since the Fifty-seventh congress. Then there was a new congressman, also from Pennsylvania, who was sitting in the house listening to a debate for the first time when a sard was brought to him. He hurriedly called a page and whispered:

"Can I go out while they are talking?"
