WOMAN AND FASHION

A Picture Hat in Monochrome. The graceful hat illustrated is in a warm tint of mulberry silk trimmed with satin ribbons, dyed tambour lace and tulle, all in the same shade of mulberry. These one-tone effects are wonderfully smart this winter. A becoming frame is easily procured, and it is the work of but an hour or two to cover it with heavy silk or satin. The dyed lace is triple box plaited and sewed in an upright fashion about the crown. It is finished with a soft roll and chou of the silk.

New Designs For Scarfs.

The newest designs and colorings in the palliated scarfs are simply exquisite. Not only are the gold and silver embroideries seen on net, but floral designs carried out with a number of colors added to the gold and silver spangles decorate fine mousseline de sole backgrounds.

The designs are in tiny empire wreaths, running vines and flowers conventionalized. The shading is as carefully done with the spangles as though embroidery silks were used. It goes without saying that these fascinating accessories are expensive, $25 being no unusual price.

Bridesmaids' Hats.

Some of the bridesmaids' hats of the year are marvels of picturesqueness. One seen lately was a wide brim affair tilting slightly to the left side and drooping ever so little. It was covered smoothly with ivory white satin and lined with rose colored mirror velvet. The brim on the under side has a new note in a narrow puff of satin at the edge which matches the velvet in shade. The front of the hat is trimmed with a perky bow arrangement of rose colored velvet ribbon with very full osprey feathers curving away at either side.

Cable Sherrings.

Cable sherrings of satin are much used for dressy toilets, being employed to applique heavy nets and laces. Panels of these trimmings are set into gracefully hanging skirts of soft material, and the idea is reproduced upon the bodice, frequently the designs of the bodice trimming being as bold as the skirt decoration. Quiet colors and single tones prevail in these effects, with consequent rich results.

Stock Scarfs Have Two Tabs.

The stock scarfs end in double tabs instead of single ones, as last year's patterns, and the only change apparent in the throw scarfs is that they are shorter than the 1908-07 varieties. Shawl scarfs in dyed fox and racoon are finished with tails on the ends, large beads doing the same duty on the suspenderlike neckpiece.

Blue Broadcloth Suit.

The suit illustrated is of Faquin blue broadcloth, a peculiar bright, dark blue that is very becoming. The skirt is gored with a full sweep at the bottom, bordered with oblongs of black velvet outlined with soutache. The same kind of braid trims the front of the skirt and borders the continental coat. The wide revers are of blue velvet trimmed with soutache and tiny black silk buttons. The vest is covered with lines of the braid. The roomy seven-eighths sleeves are trimmed with soutache and buttons. With this suit is worn a continental black felt hat edged with a band of black satin and adorned with a fancy blue plume secured with a knot of velvet.
