Open double, which forms one of the most important minor exports of Egypt, is really the sap from a special kind of tree which grows from three to five yards in height, whose forests of which are found in the Kordofan province and also near Gedid, in the White Nile province.

"The woman in front of me at the theater refused to take off her hat." "What did you do?" "I was idiot enough to make sarcastic remarks about it, and presently the woman turned around, and what do you think? It was the wife of my tailor!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Yes," said the first gallery god, describing the melodrama, "do hero done do villain up all right, but do villain wouldn't admit it."

"Gee!" exclaimed the other. "No," the first continued, "do last words do say was, 'I am undone.'"—Philadelphia Press.

"In China, dear friends," said the abashed missionary, "human life is regarded as of but very slight value. Indeed, if a wealthy Chinaman is condemned to death he can easily hire another to die for him, and I believe many poor fellows get their living by this acting as substitutes."

"Mrs. Van Astorbilt called upon me yesterday morning," said Mrs. Woodby proudly.

"Yes!" replied Mrs. Chelms, with affected indifference. "I heard she was interesting herself in charitable work, but I thought it was among the very poor."—Exchange.

With its microscopic brain the ant has not the power of reason, said a lecturer at the London Institute recently. Experiments have proved that, but it is essentially imitative, has marvelous power of adaptation and accomplishes all its remarkable work through the medium of "plastic instinct."

The inquisitive visitor to the studio of the famous but crochety artist propounded the query, "What do you mix your colors with?"

"With brains, sir," replied the painter in a dignified tone.

"Ah," commented the visitor, "so you paint miniatures?"

"At last," he sighed, "we've almost I've been hoping for this chance!"

"To have I," said she very frankly.

"Ah, you have guessed, then, that I wanted to tell you that I love you!"

"Yes, and I want to say 'No' and get it over with."—Catholic Standard and Times.

"She's really too young to go shopping alone."

"Yes, she is rather impressionable."

"Impressionable! How do you mean?"

"I mean she's liable to get excited and buy something."—Philadelphia Press.

"Ooo, George, how did you get that big bear in your trousers?"

"Jones' building grabbed me. I made Jones cough up $50 for it too."

"He paid for the trousers, did he?"

"Without a murmur. Why?"

"Say, is his dog unchained yet?"—Cleveland Leader.

"Not," said the vaudeville manager, "what makes you confident you would make a great juggler?"

"At our banding house," replied the applicant, "we had a gray boat on a slippery detached tray, and for years I have passed it to and fro with never an accident."—Kansas City Times.

Watchman (breathlessly)—The boys' dormitory is on fire, and if they find it out they'll stop to save their footballs, bats and things and perish.

Boarding School Principal (quietly)—Notify the boys that all who are not downstairs in two minutes won't get any pie.—Kansas City Independent.

First Youth—My papa got a mansion next on our home. Second Ditty (cheerily)—My papa got a mortgage on one. First—I don't care. I heard my papa say he was insured. Second (still more cheerily)—Hah! I heard papa say he was insolvent.—Baltimore American.

Many gymnasts and athletes, especially those who do bar or ring work, wear shoes of all heavy cotton or cloth. These shoes are really heavy clothing. The gymnast relies upon the feet as nature intended it for a firm foundation for his or her feats.—Boston Globe.

PUBLICITY THE PRICE OF SUCCESS There is a right way to do things. There is a large amount of profitable business to be secured by the right kind of advertising without increasing the fixed expenses. The advertiser, in the preparation of copy, must consider what will appeal to the interest from the reader's or the customer's point of view. It will not do simply to put down what seems to the advertiser to be interesting, without putting it to the test of whether it will be so to the public as well. It must contain information that the public would either like to get at, or which they could be interested in by a suggestion in the shape of a good striking headline. What the public are after principally is the goods at right prices, so that good descriptions should be included in nearly every ad. Prices are invariably of interest to the customer, and, whether the method is reliable or not, form one of the principal means of judging of the desirability of the goods.
