Timber Land Notice

United States Land Office, Lakeview Oregon, February 18, 1908.

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An act for the sale of timber lands in the states of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1892, Charles R. DeLap, of Klamath Falls, County of Klamath, State of Oregon, has filed in this office his sworn statement No. 4012, for the purchase of the sw¹/₄sec. 14, n¹/₂sec. 14, of sec. 3, tp. 38 S. range 9 E. W. M., and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before the County Judge of Klamath County, at his office at Klamath Falls, Oregon, on Wednesday the 13th day of May 1908.

He names as witnesses: T. F. Nicholas, L. D. Kitchison, True H. DeLap, A. M. Jamison, all of Klamath Falls, Oregon.

Any and all persons claiming adversely to the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 13th day of May 1908.

Trifles

The world is composed of trifles. The nerve of a tooth, finer than a cambric needle, nearly drove Napoleon Bonaparte to distraction and actually caused the mighty Caesar to lose a battle. A mosquito can drive an elephant crazy. A mouse can tease a lion to death. The reef which stinks a navy is the work of a tiny worm. The warrior that walks up to the cannon's mouth and faces death in a thousand forms is killed by an insect. Small pleasures make up the sum of human happiness. The deepest wretchedness often results from a perpetual continuance of petty pains. A single look from one you love produces exquisite pain or unalloyed pleasure. The first glass of wine that was drunk led to all the horrors, miseries and crimes that have sprung from drunkenness and darkened the earth for centuries.—New York Press.

Phantom Hounds

Conan Doyle's "Hound of the Baskervilles," a "fearsome animal," is said to have its origin in the legends of packs of spectral hounds which are popular in various parts of England and Wales. In the north of England these apparitions are known as "Ghastly hounds," in Devon the "Wick," "Yest" or "Heath hounds," in Wales "Cron Anwn" or "Cwn Wybir" and in Cornwall the "Devil's Dandy dogs." They are supposed to be evil spirits hunting the souls of the dead. Generally they are only heard and seem to be passing swiftly along in the air, as they usually choose cloudy nights for the pursuit of their prey. Their yelping is said to be terrific, resembling the note of a bloodhound. All of which tends to show that the origin of these legends of goblin hounds is to be found in the terrifying noises made by flocks of wild geese.

The Ancient Law of Doodand. "Doodand" means literally "to be given to God," and the original idea was that any inanimate object causing the death of a human being was to be sold and the proceeds disbursed in charity. In practice the sum so realized was always handed over to the next of kin of the person killed. If a cart ran over a child and killed it, the vehicle was forthwith sold, and the parents of the little victim received the proceeds of the sale. The only drawback to the scheme was that the object causing death might be comparatively valueless. It was this inequality which was mainly responsible for the abolition of the statute of doodand in 1866. In 1888 the widow of a man killed by an engine on the Liverpool and Manchester line was awarded doodand to the extent of its value, and there are other instances of even later date.—London Times.

Striving and Falling. Life is not designed to minister to man's vanity. He goes upon his long business most of the time with a hanging head and all the time like a blind child. Full of rewards and pleasures as it is—so that to see the day break or the moon rise or to meet a friend or to hear the dinner call when he is hungry fills him with surprising joys—this world is yet for him so abiding city. Friendships fall through, health fails, weariness assails him, year after year he must thumb the hardly varying record of his own weakness and folly. It is a friendly process of detachment. When the time comes that he should go there need be few illusions left about himself. "Here lies one who meant well, tried a little, failed much"—surely that may be his epitaph, of which he need not be ashamed.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Don't Get Too Proud. "Sonny," said Uncle Eben, "did you ever watch one o' des yere little tug-boats come snortin' along takin' kyan of a great big ocean liner?" "Yass, indeed," answered Pickensay Jim. "An' did you ever see one er dese 'lectric motors pick up a handsome, shiny locomotive an' drag it frum de Baltimo' tunnel?" "Lots o' times." "An' did you ever see a quiet ole knee sprung white horse pullin' a helpless automobile to town?" "I sho' has." "Well, sonny, dem's all to remind you dat, no matter how big or important an' stylish you gits, dar ain' no tellin' when you may need help frum somebody dat doe' seem to cut no figure wuf mentionin'."—Washington Star.

Hotel Life. For ourselves, we can imagine no worse punishment for persons who value privacy and intimacy and homeliness and the peculiar arrangement or even disarrangement of their own belongings than to be condemned to pass the term of their natural lives in a great hotel. The marble halls, which once seemed grand, would become a nightmare of grandiosity. The loneliness of a man among the unceasing multitude of strangers would become intolerable. The graces of the cookery, as they once seemed, would become familiar tricks and a hollow imposture. Life would become a circus without tinsel, a stage without limelight, gingerbread without gilt.

We have known an old man who had lived for many years in the same hotel, and he had all the feds and crotchets and selfishness of the worst old fogey in a club. Indeed, he had many more, and worse, for a clubman is restrained by the opinion if not by the protests of his fellows, but an old resident in a hotel can hardly be moved from insisting on more than his rights by the combined criticism of all the strangers whose opinion is nothing to him.—London Spectator.

Powerful Light For North River. The Lackawanna railroad announces that "the most powerful light ever produced from a single fixture" will soon shine from the new Lackawanna station at Hoboken. It will be a cluster of forty-nine arc lamps which will be arranged in series within a single globe six feet in diameter, each arc containing sixteen amperes at 2,900 volts. It is estimated that a candle-power of 1,800,000 will be reached.—New York Sun.
