Almost Lost.

"No," declared the duke, "I cannot marry you. Your annual income is too small."

"But wait a moment, your grace," pleaded the beautiful belle--"wait! Do not leave me before you have heard all. I shall inherit $4,000,000 from my grandmother when she dies, and we have just received a telegram saying that she is very ill."

"Ah, my sweet one, forgive me for doubting your love. Let us arrange it so that we may have bulletins from the bedside every thirty minutes."--Chicago Record-Herald.

Sounds the Same.

"My husband is a fool!" snapped Mrs. Oyster Towns.

The visitor expressed only mild surprise, but the suburban lady was moved to explain.

"You know, I wanted to persuade our hens to lay in the nests we provided. And a neighbor suggested getting a couple of nest eggs. So I telephoned my husband to bring home a couple of artificial eggs with him."

"Well, and didn't he?"

"Didn't he! The idiot brought home a couple of cork legs!"--Cleveland Leader.

Isolation in a Great City.

"New York city is no place for expansion," said a Colorado man who has been a resident of the metropolis for six months. "I find myself narrowed down here more than I was out in the wild west. I know fewer persons, my nearest neighbors know nothing about me, I am confined to less actual territory and instead of variety in this great population I find myself following substantially the same short trail day after day, within boundaries more narrow than if I lived in a village of 10,000 inhabitants."--New York Telegram.

Practical Tommy.

Owing to his extreme youth and timidity Tommy Jones escaped going to church the whole year round except on Christmas day. After one of his annual visits his uncle asked him at the dinner table if he had been a good boy and said a prayer in church.

"Oh, yes, indeed," answered Tommy. "I said a prayer like all the rest did just before the sermon began. Want to hear it?"

"Yes, indeed. What did you say?" replied the surprised uncle.

"Now I lay me down to sleep," said Tommy.--Ladies' Home Journal.

How He Was Buried.

A man returned to his native village after having emigrated to Kansas some twenty years previous. He asked about different villagers he had known in the old days and finally of the town drunkard of his time.

"Oh, he's dead," was the reply.

"Well, well! Dead and buried, is he?"

"Naps. They didn't bury him."

"Didn't bury him?" exclaimed the former resident. "Well, then, what did they do with him?"

"Oh, they just poured him back in the jug!"--Philadelphia Ledger.

Victoria Water Lilies.

The giant water lilies which are known now as Victorias, after the late queen of England, after the late queen of England, are natives of the warmer portions of South America, where they thrive in lagoons and in the quieter portions of rivers. Hasenke, a German botanist, first reported their discovery in 1801 and startled all Europe by his description of their gigantic leaves and flowers. Almost half a century had elapsed in fruitless experiments to introduce the plant into the old world when in 1869 the first flower opened on the Duke of Devonshire's estate at Chatsworth, England.

He Was a Southpaw.

The preacher was offering his felicitations to the newly married couple, says the Chicago Tribune.

"Young man," he said, "you have gained one of the fairest maidens in the community, and you, young lady, have won a stalwart partner, whose good right arm will level every obstacle that stands in the way of your success in life."

"Left, Mr. Goodman, left," corrected the bride with a proud look at the stately athlete by her side. "George is a southpaw, you know."

Yet He Wished Him Well.

"Between emotionalism and formalism in religion," says a Washington clergyman, "there is a golden mean--a reflection that came to me upon the conclusion of my remarks to a colored congregation in Richmond."

"I had invited an aged deacon to offer prayer. 'O Lord,' prayed he, 'gib dis pore brudder de eye of de eagle, dat he spy out sin afar off. Give his hands to de gospel plow. Tie his tongue to de line of truth. Nail his yere to de gospel pole. Bow his head way down between his knees, O Lord, an' fix his knees way down in some lonesome, dark an' narrow valley where prayer is much wanted to be made. 'Noint him wif de keroseene ole of salvashun an' set him on fire!'"

Little Willie Was There.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones and their little boy of six on leaving a party they had been to thought they would go the nearest way home, which led across some fields. When nearly home they had to cross a ditch, which, to their surprise and horror, was flooded. They consulted each other as to whether they should wade through it or return and go the other way, which meant a five mile walk. They finally decided to wade through it, so Mrs. J. took the little boy's hand and Mr. J. his wife's arm and started crossing. They gradually found it deeper and deeper until at last it was up to their armpits, when suddenly Mr. J. exclaimed, "Where is little Willie?" "He's here," said Mrs. J. "I've got his hand."
