No Was Too Hasty.

A prominent automobilist condemned scorching at a dinner.

"I condemn," he said, "scorching and the scorcher, but I don't condemn the accused man hastily. Hasty condemnation is always a mistake. Once on a Canadian railway I got off the train for a five minute luncheon at a railway eating bar. There was a man beside me gobbling away, and when he finished I heard him say bitterly, as he took out his purse:

"Call that a ham sandwich? It's the worst ham sandwich I ever ate. No more taste than sawdust and so small you could hardly see it."
"You're at yer ticket," said the waiter. "This here's yer ham sandwich."
—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Snake Myths.

Snakes have no medicinal qualities, and the following popular notions are myths: That galls of snakes are an antidote for snake bites; that their oil is good for rheumatism, baldness and deafness; that wearing their skins will cure rheumatism or stiffness; that a snake heart, oil or blood is good for consumption or other ills; that snake flesh should be eaten for blood disorders; that a second bite of the snake in the same place will cure or counteract the first bite; that rattlers of snakes are charms.

The Modern Restlessness.

Like the Athenians of old, most people are vainly searching for some new thing, only to look upon it when they find it with suspicion. Of the vast majority it is as true today as it was last written—

They eat, they drink, they sleep, they nod.

They go to church on Sunday, And many are afraid of God, And more of Mrs. Grundy.

—London Ladies' Field.

Cutting Down Competition.

"I saved $500 this year by moving."
"Cheaper house?"
"No; I found that my wife was trying to outdress a rich woman in the same block."

Scented Waist Hangers.

Shirt waist hoes are all very well but they cannot accommodate more than two or three waists without crushing, and invariably the waists which one wants is at the bottom of the box.

If one has plenty of closet room it is a much better plan to use waist hangers on a clothes pole extended across the platform.

Every woman delights in dainty toilet belongings and will appreciate prettily covered waist hangers scented with her favorite perfume.

The frame should first be covered with cotton plentifully sprinkled with sachet.

An additional touch of daintiness may be had by suspending six or more tiny sachet bags from the center with baby ribbon.

This is also a very good idea for a hanger for lightweight skirts.

Odd Handkerchief Case.

A pretty handkerchief case can be made of two Japanese paper serviettes, with plain borders. Cut a square of cotton wool the exact size, sprinkle with scented or sachet powder or insert within it a small silk bag of powdered orris root and place the scented wool between the serviettes. Baste firmly but lightly together and then neatly bind with ribbon matching the pattern of the serviettes. Now turn in each of the corners toward the center in envelope style and on one of the points fix a piece of ribbon to tie together in a bow.

A glove sachet may be made the same way, only the serviettes are folded lengthwise, and the corners of the upper part are turned down, a tiny bow of ribbon at each point. The edges are bound same as handkerchief case and lightly tied in the center with bows of ribbon.

There is a story that Charlotte Bronte when a girl of sixteen broke out angrily at some one who said she was always talking about clever people, such as Johnson and Sheridan. "Now, you don't know the meaning of clever," she said. "Sheridan might be clever—scamps often are—but Johnson had a spark of 'cleverality' in him." That remark really gives the essence of Johnson and the key to the great qualities of his work, for in his case even more than in most the prose was the man. Whoever wants "cleverality" had best leave Johnson alone. The signal merit of Johnson's writings is that he always means what he says and always says what he means. He may often have talked for victory, but except perhaps in the political pamphlets he always wrote for truth.—London Times.
