PRISONER HIS OWN JAILER.

Amusing Story of a Murderer Who Refused to Be Released.

Monaco has no gallotines and no executioner and, indeed, no arrangements for dealing with criminals. It is the place to recall the amusing story told by Maupassant about a murderer who was tried, convicted and sentenced to death in Monte Carlo. The authorities asked France to loan them M. Delbier and his little instrument, the "red widow." The French government consented to oblige for the consideration of $1,000. The price thought this too dear and so applied to his brother of Italy. Italy offered to do the thing, all included, for $800. This again was found too dear. "The man is not worth it," said the Monagasque authorities.

So the sentence of death was commuted to one of life imprisonment. But there was no prison in Monaco, and a goal had to be erected for the express purpose of confining this murderer, and a jailer had to be appointed. This state of things lasted for some months, and then the jailer died.

The authorities at Monte Carlo, when considering the appointment of his successor, came to the conclusion that the man, the one prisoner, was costing the state a great deal of money. So a commission visited him and told him that in future he would be required to act as his own jailer. He grumbled a bit at this increase of sentence, but complied. His meals used to be sent down to him from one of the hotels in the town, but one day the scullion who brought him his dinner did not turn up to time, and so the prisoner walked up to the hotel and took his meal there. After that he got into the habit of going up to the hotel for his meals. Then, after a stroll on the front, he used to return to his prison and shut himself in, carefully bolting the door inside.

But again the authorities found that he was costing them too much, and so one day they called him up and told him that they were sick of seeing him about the place and that he must clear out. He emphatically refused to do anything of the kind. "You sentenced me to penal servitude for life," he argued, "and I expect to work out my sentence. I have no means of earning a livelihood since you created all the bother, and it is to you that I look for my sustenance."

To cut a long story short, the principality of Monaco was obliged to settle an annuity of $24 a year upon the convict before he would consent to accept his freedom and leave the country. As soon as this was arranged he took up his abode in a little cottage just over the Monaco border.

This is a true story, and the document fixing the man's pension, together with details about the payments, may be seen in the Monaco archives. The late Prince de Monaco was fond of telling this story in Parisian drawing rooms, and, if I remember aright, I heard it on the same occasion as did the late Guy de Maupassant--London Mail.
