Why He is a Bachelor.
 "I've been very close to matrimony several times," remarked a confirmed old bachelor at an uptown club, "and every time my inclination has been sidetracked by the same sort of incident—the discovery of a trait which appears to be practically universal among the fair sex."
 "Drink" asked the cynic.
 "No; the confidence game. Every woman I ever knew intimately was sure to relate to me eventually something in 'strictest confidence,' which later it appeared had been told to her in 'strictest confidence.' I won't let up with a woman who does that."
 "Guess you'll die single, all right," said the cynic.
 "I'm sure of it," said the bachelor.—New York Globe.

A Bargain.
 He—Miss Hunt, I love you, but now I dare not dream of calling you mine. Yesterday I was worth $10,000, but today, by a turn of fortune's wheel, I have but a few paltry hundreds to call my own. I would not ask you to accept me in my reduced state. Farewell forever!
 She (sighing)—Good gracious! Reduced from $10,000 to $100! What a bargain! Of course I'll take you. You might have known I couldn't resist.—Magazine.

Odd Fellows, Take Notice

 O. A. STEARNS, Secretary.

To the Electors of Klamath County
 GENTLEMEN:—Having received the nomination of the Republican party for the office of sheriff, I wish to express to you my appreciation of your efforts in my behalf. I feel the more grateful, knowing as I do, that it was the people without any political combination, who have so honored me. I extend to each of you personally my thanks for your efforts and confidence in me.
 Respectfully Yours,
 W. B. BARNES.

All such settlement or occupation being forbidden by the laws of the United States. Section 20, T. 53N., R. 9 E., Oregon. FRED DENNETT, Commissioner of the General Land Office.

THE CRIPPLE AND HIS FATHER.
 Not even the wide flapping trousers of his sailor suit could wholly hide the slender form wasting away from lack of use. Smoldering brown eyes illuminated the little face, made wiser by hours of pain, as he smiled up at the tall man at his side, who, broad of shoulder and strong of face, smiled back encouragingly.
 A troop of small boys noisily invaded the car at the next station. Heedless in their good spirits, one of their number was roughly pushed against a crutch, causing it to fall to the floor. The man's eyes blazed more with anguish than with anger as he exclaimed harshly, "Be careful!"
 The sturdy urchin, awed at what had occurred, subsided in seats opposite. The man looked over their heads into space. The child looked first at the boys, then with questioning eyes back at the man.
 "Father," he whispered as he lightly touched his sleeve, "would you love me better if I was like those boys?"
 The man gave a startled glance across the aisle at "those boys," innocent in their perfect health and boyhood vigor, then tightly grasping the hand nearest to him said "No, son. I love you better than all the world—just as you are."—New York Times.

RISKY SPECULATION.
 In the days "befo' de wab" a handy negro named Jack was saving money earned at odd times with which to buy his freedom. His master encouraged him and kept his money for him. In time Jack had saved $900 and needed only another hundred to make him free. His master told him that it wouldn't be long now until he could get another hundred. Jack went out with another slave to celebrate some local festival. Returning along the railroad track they were frightened by an approaching train. Both got off the track, but Jack's companion fell and, striking his head against a rock, was killed. Jack hurried as rapidly as he could to his master's house. It was a late hour, but the master must hear him. He said, "Gimme mah money right now." The astonished master remonstrated, saying, "But, Jack, you need only another hundred dollars to get free." "I knows it, Mars Henry, I knows it, but niggers is too onsertin. Hill jes' killed himself by bustin' his head agin a rock, an' I ain' gwine to luv' mah money in nothin' as onsertin as niggers."—Washington Herald.

POSTOFFICE "DERELICTS."
 On an average no less than 150,000 letters are posted annually without any address, some of them containing money which amounts to about $6,000 a year. Among the cryptographic addresses submitted for decipherment to the postoffice expert were "Obanvi dock," which being interpreted is "Hobborn Viaduct," and "Hilewite," which stands more obviously for "Isle of Wight." These were easy of decipherment compared with a letter addressed "Hasefeach in no fampsthere," which nevertheless was duly forwarded to "Hazelbeach, Northamptonshire," and with another thus superscribed, "To the Cectery of Wore, Chelisey Osllite, London, Queen Victoria," which was duly delivered to the secretary of war.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

THE ANTS OF THE HIMALAYAS.
 In the Himalayas, on the side facing India, the limit of perpetual snow is about 4,500 feet higher than in the Alps. One result of this is that various forms of life are found in the great Asian mountains at an elevation which seems extraordinary. Among these are many species of ants. Up to nearly 10,000 feet the ants are very abundant, and even at the elevation of 12,000 feet four species have been found, and it is believed that more careful investigation would show that they exist even at 13,000 feet or more. A unique fact not found in any other great mountain range is that the Himalayas possess an immense variety of local species of ants. Out of 115 forms recognized in the Himalayas fifty are peculiar to those mountains.—Youth's Companion.

QUEER ANT WINGS.
 In the "Comptes Rendus" M. Charles Janet has an interesting note on the muscular apparatus of the wings of the queen ant. Although the wings are only used once in a lifetime of perhaps ten years, this apparatus is the biggest organ in the body. After fertilization the wings are cast aside and the muscles disappear, being replaced by little columns of adipose tissue. The disappearance of the muscles has been attributed to phagocytosis—that is, the absorbing of the tissues by leucocytes. Janet, however, shows that there is no phagocytosis, but that the material of the muscles goes to enrich the blood.—London Globe.

Medicine of the Soul.
 Medicine and religion, which are too frequently regarded as mutually antagonistic, should be mutually complementary. There are many diseases in which the medicine of the soul is a powerful adjunct in the treatment of the body.—British Medical Journal.
The Salt Sea.
 Children's answers are always a fruitful source of amusement. A girl fifteen or sixteen years old who had received what was supposed to be a good education was describing to me her recent visit to the Tower of London. Among the many wonders she had seen was a sword given to Henry VIII. by Max Muller, an amusing though not altogether unnatural substitute for the Emperor Maximilian. If children are allowed to think for themselves their answers are amusingly original. "What do you think makes the sea salty?" was a question put to the national school class. A brilliant idea struck a boy. "Please, sir, the 'errings.'"—Cornhill Magazine.

CORNISH DIALECT.

SOME QUaint TERMS That Are Common Among the Natives.
 "A hitched my foot in the scence and knacked my nuddick, and A wadn't able to cluncky for a fortnight." Readers of dialect tales will probably take it for granted that this sentence is Scotch. It is, however, Cornish and, being interpreted, means, "I caught my foot in the pavement and struck the nape of my neck, and I was not able to swallow for a fortnight."
 There are some quaint terms common in Cornwall which have a pleasing savor of their own. The phrase "my dear"—prolonged to two syllables—is not, for instance, any indication of especial affection. It is a common form of address to either man or woman. So also, though with rather more discrimination in its use, is "my dear life."
 A young child is mentioned in terms of endearment as "my 'ansome" or "tender dear" or even "tender worm." "Son" and "sonny" are used without the least relation to the age or sex of the person addressed. A son may sometimes be heard speaking to his own father as "my son" or a husband calling his wife "sonny."
 "Young" means simply unmarried. A bachelor of eighty is "a young man." Of a bride still in her teens it was said that she was "a pretty lot better looking than when she was young." An old person is not simply old. He is "old ancient." Several New England localisms are found in Cornish speech, as "cricket" for a small stool, "chores" for household jobs and "dowdy" for pudding, though in America the latter word survives only as part of "pandowdy," the delicious deep spiced apple pie of country housewives.
 A Cornish anecdote relates that a small boy left at home to supervise the family dinner while the rest of the household were at church, having, like King Alfred, neglected his duty and allowed the fig pudding to scorch, in his dismay ran to the church and from the doorway made signs to the housewife to come forth. She indignantly signed him to wait, which for a time he did, but at length, becoming impatient, cried aloud in reply to her further wails and grimaces, to the scandal of the startled congregation:
 "Ylew may winky and skrinky as long as ylew duv phrase, but the figgy dowdy is burnt gin the crock!"—Liverpool Mercury.

THE STORMY PETREL.

A Naturalist's Efforts to Discover the Secret of Its Flight.
 A naturalist visiting Algeria bought from a sailor four captive stormy petrels. They weighed about 1.55 pounds apiece. Their wings were five inches wide and had a spread of four feet. The ability of the petrel to breast the most furious storms has been universally admired. Its name is derived from its power of walking on the waves, like the apostle Peter, and its courage and strength in planting its footsteps on the crests of the most tempestuous sea have given a text to many writers. The naturalist, wishing to release his captive petrels, threw one of them into the air. It tried to fly, but fell headlong, went crashing against a stone wall and battered out its brains. He took the second petrel to an upper story and launched it from a window; but, having no initial velocity, it, too, fell like a stone. The third bird he took to the top of an observatory and pushed it out into space. It flapped its wings desperately, but nevertheless lunged downward and broke its wings against a post.
 The naturalist was now convinced that the stormy petrel's feat at sea were made possible because it first gets up momentum by running along the top of the water. Wishing to give the remaining bird a chance to demonstrate his theory, he took it out into a desert-like plain bare of grass, smooth as the surface of a calm sea. "Here," the naturalist reports, "I set my fourth petrel down. It squatted at first and then turned with its beak to the wind and its wings outstretched and started running, beating its wings, not hampered by any herbage. It ran a hundred yards, carrying its weight less and less on its feet and finally all on its wings, but all the time skimming the ground. At last with a single bound, catching the wind, the petrel rose sixty feet, crested around and flew past me overhead and glanced at me on its way, as if to say, 'Success in flight is all based upon momentum.'"—Harold Bolce in Everybody's.

Napoleon.
 There is no doubt Napoleon fell through the sheer dizziness of the height he had climbed to. "The Duc de Raguse," says the Comtesse de Boigne, "once explained to me the nature of his connection with the emperor in a phrase which is more or less applicable to the whole nation. 'When Napoleon said, "All for France," I served with enthusiasm. When he said, "France and I," I served with zeal. When he said, "I and France," I served with obedience. When he said "I" without France, I felt the necessity of parting from him.'"—T. P.'s London Weekly.

A Night on the Sleeper.
 "Have you ever traveled in a sleeping car, Uncle Jasper?"
 "Yes, oncet. But I didn't sleep any."
 "What was the trouble?"
 "You see, I'd just greased my boots, and I'd heard tell about them porters always takin' people's shoes out and blackin' em, so I had to keep awake all night so he wouldn't git a hold of mine, fer I knew if he done it he'd want extra on account of the hard job. Blasted if I can see why the company allows them kind of things to go on."—Chicago Record-Herald.
