Obituary

No clergyman officiating at the burial of Charles Brennan, the following remarks being delivered at the grave by I. L. Whitworth:

My Friends—We have assembled here in this "Hamlet of the dead" today, to pay the last sad rites to this "old soldier." Around this open grave we are brought face to face with the inevitable, where it behoves us all to do our whole duty to man. How well this has been done, is shown by the disposition of all who gave aid and blessing to our brother, that has winged his flight to join the army of the great beyond—peace be with him.

Charles Brennan was born in Ireland about 65 years ago; came to America in his early manhood; was a soldier in the war of the Rebellion and was with General Sherman on his march to the sea. He solved the mystery of death some few days ago and without a struggle passed over the river to that "beyond" which none have rendered an accounting. His body was found on the farm of Captain J. P. Lee, an old soldier who fought for the "lost cause" and who succeeded "old Charlie Brennan" during his last days on earth. How strange, yet how true. The man who would shoot his brother man in times of war, becomes his best friend in the end. It shows clearly in my mind that single touch of nature which makes the whole world kin. In our quiet sober moments it brings us close together indeed, and it is only again a manifestation of the "true love" we have for each other.

While no marble or granite slab will mark his grave, yet in the kind deeds of his friends this humble funeral becomes indelible and will last until "time runneth not to the contrary." In the minds of all here assembled. Amen.

W. H. Dulaney,

Just Its Way.

March has many moods, they say. Her it takes its leave—
Something different for each day
Always up its sleeve.

Wasn't Her Fortune.

"Why don't you marry a millionaire, Maud?"
"Haven't the nerve to try, Edith."
"Different with me."
"Why?"
"I haven't the face."

Officers Safe.

"Do they have corporal punishment in the army?"
"You bet they don't, and you doesn't punch the lieutenant either. I tell you, them officers has things about their way."

Has the Ladies Guessing.

"Do you know a good comedienne?"
"Yes."
"What is it?"
"Why is a bachelor?"

Don't Be Afraid

IF THERE is sickness in the house, even the most severe sickness, and you are compelled to get a doctor, don't be afraid to bring that doctor's prescription to our store to have it filled.

IT MAKES no difference to us who the doctor is. It makes no difference how complicated the prescription is which he writes. It makes no difference how much he desires the prescription to be filled exactly as it is written. It makes no difference how much he wishes the ingredients used in the prescription to be pure.

ALL WE SAY is "don't be afraid to bring the prescription here. IT MAKES no difference whose prescription blank your doctor uses in writing the prescription, you have the privilege of taking that prescription to any store you prefer. We absolutely guarantee to you, satisfaction if you bring your prescription here.

WE GUARANTEE that under no consideration, or for no necessary inducement will we allow a single prescription to go out of our store except it is exactly as the doctor writes it, and that it is filled with the highest quality ingredients which can be supplied to us.

His False Step.

"I suppose," said the good meaning lady, addressing the man behind the bars, "that you are able to look back now and sincerely regret your first false step."

"Surest thing you know, lady. I was gettin' off'n a street car, and if I'd knew what I know now I'd of soaked the company for big damages; prettendin' I broke my leg or something."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Valuable Man.

"Yes, he had some rare trouble with his eyes," said the celebrated oculist. "Every time he started to read he would read double."

"Poor fellow!" remarked the sympathetic person. "I suppose that interfered with his holding a good position."
"Not at all. The gas company got him up in a jiffy and gave him a lucrative job reading gas meters."—London Opinion.

Expert Already.

"Brother," said the evangelist to a man who had expressed a wish to abandon his post and adopt a better way of living. "do you think you can walk in the straight and narrow path?"
"Straight and narrow?" smiled the new convert. "Why, parson, that will be a clutch for me. I've been a tight rope walker for ten years."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Taking No Chances.

An English visitor to Carnoustie last summer was one day starting a match when his caddy asked to see his cigarette case and when it was handed to him coolly put it in his pocket. The visitor expostulated. The caddy responded: "It's a right, sir. I'll gie it back to ye after the round. Ye see, I've gotten hauf a croon on ye, an' I dinna mean ye to smoke till ye wint' gang on. I'll take care o' ye a' richt."

The Highest Windmill.

The highest windmill in England is the High Mill at Great Yarmouth. It is believed also to be the highest in the world. Built in 1812 at a total cost of $50,000, its height in brick is 100 feet, and the wooden cage on the summit further increases this another ten feet. In a high wind the mill works at thirty horsepower and is capable of grinding nine coomb of wheat an hour or crushing ten coomb of oats an hour.

Knew His Business.

A circus man recently ordered a large advertising poster of his show to be printed and objected because there was so much clear sky in it.
"I ain't a goin' to advertise the sky," he said to the lithographer. "I paid you to advertise my show. Draw a few camels and stick them up in the 'avenly blue. I ain't a goin' to have all that good space run to waste."—Liverpool Mercury.

Origin of Pugilism.

Man being instinctively a pugnacious animal and the fist being the simplest and most natural weapon, it may safely be assumed that pugilism, as a mode of settling difficulties, is coeval with man himself. So far as we know, boxing for men was introduced in the Olympic games in the twenty-third Olympiad, 709 B. C., and for boys in the thirty-seventh Olympiad, 690 B. C.—New York American.

A Natural Request.

A capital instance of child's logic is sent us by a correspondent. "In a letter just received from my son in New South Wales," she writes, "he mentions overhearing the following on board a steamer from Sydney to Melbourne: A very senesick little four-year-old girl said to her mother, 'Oh, mamma, please do let the ship walk!'"—London Globe.

His Way of Putting It.

Paul Louis Courier, when bitterly assailed by a French professor, quietly remarked: "I fancy he must be vexed. He calls me Jacobin, rebel, plagiarist, thief, poisoner, forger, leper, madman, impostor, calumniator, libeler, a horrible, filthy, grimacing raggicker. I gather what he wants to say. He means that he and I are not of the same opinion, and this is his only way of putting it."

Didn't Get the Reward.

A jeweler hung a watch in his window and labeled it, "Look at this watch for 10 shillings." And the unappreciated gentleman who stared at the article and then went in and wanted the 10 shillings had to get down on the floor with the jeweler and roll over and under him a number of times before he could be made to understand that he couldn't have any 10 shillings.—London Telegraph.
