"What's that?"
"There is no salary connected with it."

"To keep from being stupid. We don't like to be stupid."

Star Drug Store

"The Store that Saves You Money"

The Hustler Rampant.
Have something doing all the time
That boasts you to success,
Transforms your dreams to bank accounts

And helps you more or less
The action makes the wheels go round
And never brings the goal
Providing the substantial things
That satisfy the soul.

The man with method in his work
Who daily plots along
May never do a utilitarian thing
Or at one point be strong.
But if he keeps his motion up,
A steady gait and slow,
When welcome pay day comes around
He has results to show.

'Tis not by sitting in a chair
And having schemes in burn
That man can rope and throw success.
As near as we can learn,
Nor is it yet by telling what
His neighbors ought to do
That he can make the money come
And stick like liquid glue.

It's nothing but the patient grind,
Pursued from day to day,
That gathers substance for the man
And puts the same away.
This policy pursued for years
Success is bound to win,
But it won't hurt if he can have
A streak of luck mixed in.

A Quandary.

"Where did you get that counterfeit dollar?"
"I picked it up on the street."
"I should have thought you would have been afraid to do that?"
"I didn't dare pass it, did I?"

Two of a Kind.

"So you are a literary gent," said the rural inquisitor to the casual visitor.
"That is what they call me."
"Yes, I heard them call you that, and I wondered what it meant. What do you have to do to be a literary gent?"
"I contribute to the magazine."
"Glad to meet you. I contribute some to the local paper myself."
"Is that so? What is the nature of your contributions?"
"Oh, different things. Last year I contributed a load of pumpkins."

Way We Know.

"Hello! It will soon be dog days!"
"That's a poor guess. Dog days do not come until fall."
"That's where you show you are not posted on the statutes. Dog days begin in May, when you have to pay your dog license."

Always Breaking Them in.
"King Edward never wears a pair of shoes more than one time."
"Is that right?"
"So I hear."
"He must be so grouchy that the queen can hardly live with him."

Willing to Divide.
"Let me sell you a 'History of the Thirty Years' War.'"
"What's the price?"
"Sixteen dollars."
"Can't afford it. I will give you $8 for fifteen of them."
