PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The best way to keep a friend is always to have a stock of something he wants and never let him have quite enough of it.

There is probably nothing that is so bad but that it might be better.

The yellow peril that strikes terror to the hearts of most housekeepers is the gas bill.

Never look a society lie in the face nor a birthday present in the price mark.

If you don't gossip about your trouble, probably you won't trouble the gossip.

A man whose family had to eat three times a day on seven dollars a week doesn't have much time to hunt up affiliates.

The man who shouts out his story from the house-top will generally be found to have some goods to dispose of.

The probabilities are that the less a man parades his religion the more actively it is engaged in real work.

The way to learn how to live is to live and endeavor to incite the dead ones to wake up.

No man is any better than he should be nor as bad as he could be.

Give Her a Chance.

Do not in the early morning
Call upon the dainty maid
Who has captured your affections
Who has been to love first aid
Wait till she has stirred her frizzes
And has opened up her eyes
Soon enough when you get married
You'll be disillusioned

Every moment of her being
She can't be on dress parade
With her hair so neatly braided
And her features all handmaiden
She must have some relaxation
Being always at her best,
Marched and primed and in fine loon,
When would she have time to rest?

In a faded gown next morning
She must stand before the truck,
Baking flapjacks for her brother,
Washing dishes for a change,
And the dress so white and dainty
That at parties must be worn
Is discarded for a wrapper
Faded, old and maybe torn.

After you have learned to know her
As a fellow knows his frau
You can stand her then in gingham,
But the sight would shock you now.
So when you would pay a visit
To your sweetest, dearest one
Do not fail to give her notice—
Call her up by telephone.

Explained.

"I wonder why these people came?" asked the comedian scornfully as he peeped through the curtain on a bitter cold night when there were about forty persons in the house.

"Probably," replied the heavy villain, "they came in to warm their feet."

From Missouri.

"Love me and the world is mine," he pleaded theatrically, with pale lips and pallid brow.

"There is one thing necessary first," said she tersely.

"What is it? Ah, what is it?"

"You must put up some collateral."

Maybe.

When things at home go all askew
And nothing seems a-doing
You'd better get a move on you,
Perhaps there's trouble brewing.

Tooth Artist.

"What lovely teeth she has!"

"Yes; she's very clever."

"Indeed! What has that to do with her teeth?"

"She always patronizes artists even for mechanical things."

Old Games Best.

"Fellow claims he can make gold out of the laser metals."

"Think it can be done?"

"Well, he can probably clean up a nice yellow bunch from the credulous stockholders."

Talks All the Time.

"Now, John, do give close attention to everything I say."

"Yes, dear, but—"

"But what?"

"I have to give some attention to business, you know."

Fickle.

"So she is a married woman. The last time I saw her she claimed to be wedded to her art."

"Well, she is wedded to her Bill now."

TIMELY WARNING.

Don't treat the house fly kindly
Or make of it a pet,
But put it with a bad rat
Or spread for it a net.
We need to call it harmless,
But now the doctor sees
That on the padding of its feet
It picks around disease.

Although it fits so tightly,
The creature carries weight,
With marvelous it is laden,
With germs on local freight,
And when it bites a person
In payment it may leave
A week or two of sickness
And thus its food relieve.

By the disease whose symptoms
Are like a summer cold
May not come from exposure,
As you have oft been told.
The reason for the ailment
May be a posh fly
That went where there was sickness
And got a fresh supply.

By of your pet aversions
Just keep it on your list,
And if it gets familiar,
Why, slap it on the wrist.
If when you are not looking
To take a bite it tries,
Request the fly to kindly
Take some one of its size.

Called.

Reggy—Bah Jove, I told my tailor I'd like to marry some rich girl and become interested in settlement work!

Percy—What did he say?

Reggy—He said I'd better get to work and make a settlement on that suit I bought two years ago.—Denver News-Times.

Some men seem to want a home so that they will have some place to stay away from.

Getting their fortune told is simply a vicious way some people have of gambling.
