KLAMATH FALLS, WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 8, 1908

The uninitiated who read the sensational newspapers firmly believe that the daughter of the rich has a private income that would support a dozen orphan asylums, and that she never wears a frock but once, and then only for an hour, says Mrs. Osborn in the August Delineator.

On the contrary, it is quite a fad among the fashionable at present to put their daughters on a dress allowance--and not a large one, either--at a very early age. I have seen girls at fifteen and sixteen struggling with the problem of keeping within their incomes that, promises well for the well-planned wardrobe of the next generation of American women.

They are very conscientious about it, too, these small business women in short skirts. The mother who instituted the allowance is only too often the weaker member of the contracting parties. It is an amusing reversal of Stock Ranch For Rent old conditions to hear the daughter arguing economy and In Wood River Valley, Klamath Co., common sense.

The mother, weakly, "But really darling, I think you further particulars inquire of T. A.

A large picture of Wm. H. Taft, dressed in a fur overcoat, has been turned to the wall in the headquarters of the Republican national committee. The thermometer registered 100 in the shade and it was said the picture was too warm.

The mother, weakly, "But really darling, I think you ought to have it."

The child, kindly but firmly, "No mother I do not need that pink pongee, my white linen is good enough, It is quite a hobby of mine that you cannot begin to early to give a girl a sense of proportion; to develope her feeling of fitness of things of dress, to educate her tasts as carefully as you would train her voice or mind. She ought to be taught the beauty or completion when she is picking out her hair ribbons.

The mother who keeps her child's clothes entirely in her own hands until she has reached young-womanhood is doing her a great in justice. A well-dressed woman isn't made in a day, and a fine discernment and discrimination in dress only comes with years of experience, during which was given foosewelf's name at Chicago,
