

CYCLORAMA OF LAKE

Famous New York Scenic Artist to Paint Crater Lake

Painting Will Be On Exhibition at Seattle Exposition With Other Great Scenic Pictures from the United States --Next Painting Will Be of Alaska Scenery

From this globe of ours from pole to pole and around its equator, going into the highways and by-ways in search for scenic grandeur and beauty, one must return to Klamath county for its greatest treasure. Thus Edward A. Morange, of New York City, express himself on the beauties of Crater Lake. Mr. Morange is an authority whose opinion carries much weight wherever it is expressed, for he is a scenic artist of world-wide repute. He it is who paints for the United States Government all of the panoramas that are to be seen at the great expositions, and his visit to Crater Lake at this time was for the purpose of securing sketches for a great cyclorama of this wonderful scenic gem, to be exhibited at the Seattle exposition next year.

"I had an idea that I had seen nature's greatest wonders and most beautiful scenery, but all pale insignificance when compared with Crater Lake. The Grand Canyon of Colorado, of which so much has been written and pictured is as nothing when compared with Crater Lake for beauty and scenic effect. They say a camera does not lie, but I say it lies every time it pictures this lake, for the simple reason that photography has not yet progressed far enough to reproduce a picture commensurate with the magnitude, beauty and scenic worth of Crater Lake. Any have tried to tell me about it and I little realized how futile were their efforts until I stood on the rim and viewed this scenic wonder for the first time. The conditions were ideal, the air being perfectly clear and I was able to see it to the very best advantage.

From a commercial point of view Klamath county holds one of the richest treasures of nature, for as soon as people on the outside begin to hear about Crater Lake they will flock here by the thousands. They will not only come from this country, but from every country on the globe. My travels I have had ample opportunity to meet with those who travel for the purpose of viewing the beauties of nature, and I know how highly they will prize what they will find when they come to Klamath county. The first thing to be done is the construction of good roads and if the movement for the construction of the road from Medford to this city, by way of Crater Lake, is successful, the people here will get all of the money they invest in it back the first year. It is my first visit here, but rest assured it will not be my last. Mr. Morange left yesterday morning for Alaska, where he will prepare sketches for pictures of Uncle Sam's northern possessions.

LOOKS LIKE LACK OF BUSINESS ENTERPRISE.

G. L. Limbarger, representing a St. Louis hardware firm, is in the city today to receive a shipment of fifty Home Comfort Ranges, which were sold to residents of Klamath county. The big shipment has arrived at the Transportation Company's office and delivery will be made in the next three weeks. Here are fifty ranges which should have been sold by the merchants of this county, and it looks as if there was either a lack of business enterprise on the part of the merchants of this county or else the farmers are awfully poor. If the price and quality are equal, it looks as if it would be to the advantage of the farmers to buy at home, so that in case everything was not satisfactory it could be remedied.

UPPER LAKE NOTES.

Messrs. Peterson and Wakefield went up the lake yesterday with a party of Portland hunters to be gone about a week. A brother of Mr. Peterson was one of the number.

The frame for the new tug boat being built at the upper landing is assuming form and it is expected that all the frame will be up Saturday night.

Frank McCornack's new bungalow is beginning to loom up the last few days. He is rushing work on the building.

W. H. Sunderman, a former real estate agent of this city, is here on a visit from his home near Talent in Jackson county.

CLEAN UP AND DECORATE FOR CARNIVAL WEEK.

The Big Carnival starts Monday and it is about time for the people of Klamath Falls to get busy cleaning up especially in the business section on Main street. There will be many strangers here besides the farmers from all over the county and it is well for the city to look its best. These people will expect to see Klamath Falls in its best trim, so it is up to the people here not to disappoint them. A number of the business houses have already started in on their booths and if everyone would do so it would add greatly to the appearance. Those who cannot put up booths should decorate. Everyone should get in and do their share toward making the Carnival a grand success, and not disappoint the many visitors who are coming.

ARGUING MEDFORD LOCAL OPTION CASE.

Attorney W. M. Colvig and Attorney Robert G. Smith are this week arguing the Medford liquor case before the supreme court. The decision will probably not be rendered for some weeks to come.

This is the case of J. C. Hall vs. G. W. Dunn et al. to enjoin the county court from declaring prohibition in that part of Jackson county within the corporate limits of the city of Medford. The case was carried to the supreme court on an appeal taken by the prohibitionists from the decision of Circuit Judge Hanna in favor of the petitioners.

EXHIBIT BUILDING FOR FARM PRODUCTS.

The Jennings building, next to the Brick Store, has been secured for the display of the agricultural exhibits during the week of the Carnival. Judge Baldwin, director of exhibits, will have some one on hand the first thing Monday to receive and arrange the exhibits as they are brought in. It is desired that those having products from Klamath Falls bring them in as early Monday as possible, so as more time will be given to attend to the exhibits from the country which will arrive later.

EXTRA POLICE FOR CARNIVAL.

A number of extra police will be put on duty Monday to serve during Carnival week. At present the city is only using two policemen but they will have to have help next week, especially at night.

HONEYWELL HAS RECEIVED A LETTER FROM DR. FIELDING ASKING HIM TO BUILD A 200,000 CUBIC FOOT BALLOON FOR THE TRIP AND TO ACCOMPANY HIM AS PILOT. HE TOOK HONEYWELL TWO MINUTES TO DECIDE TO GO. HE IS NOW PLANNING THE BALLOON. INSTEAD OF THE USUAL BASKET THE AERONAUTS WILL OCCUPY A 12-FOOT MOTOR BOAT. WHILE IN THE AIR A PROPELLER TO ASSIST THE BALLOON WILL BE USED. A FEW PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

What is a Political Party? What is a Republican? What is a Democrat?

Without political parties popular government is impossible.

What is a political party? There are at least two definitions. One is, that a political party is a voluntary association of men holding certain fundamental political principles in common which they seek to express in legislation. That is the Republican party.

Another definition is that a political party is a miscellaneous heterogeneous, kaleidoscopic, phantasmagoric aggregation of discordant inconsistencies revolving from force of habit around a vacant chair occupied by a political principle never incorporated into law. That is not the Republican party.

If you ask, What is a Republican? I answer you that according to the last election he was about two-thirds of everybody.

If you ask me What is a Democrat? I am obliged to state to you that in my search for reliable Democratic exposition on this subject, I have found it impossible to reconcile conflicting authorities, and can only present to you some of the more recent authoritative Democratic declarations on this somewhat vexed question.

For illustration, some time ago the Albany Argus charged that the New York World had "not had a Democratic thought or drawn a Democratic breath or experienced a Democratic instinct or sentiment in more than a decade."

To which the World, after observing that in that case it, the World, "must be almost as undemocratic as the Democratic party itself," proceeded to reply by inquiring, "But what is a Democrat in this particular year of our Lord?"

And inquiring further said: "If Mr. Bryan is a Democrat, what is Mr. Cleveland?"

"If Mr. Cleveland is a Democrat, what is Mr. Hearst?"

"If Mr. Hearst is a Democrat, what is Judge Parker?"

"If Judge Parker is a Democrat, what are Murphy, Connors, and McCarran?"

"If they are Democrats, what is Woodrow Wilson?"

"If he is a Democrat, what is Tom Taggart?"

"If Taggart is a Democrat, what are Daniel and Rayner and Culbertson and Morgan and John Sharp Williams?"

"If they are Democrats, what are Ryan and Belmont?"

That was last year.

If you ask me what is a Democrat this year I refer you to Mr. Cleveland's recent letter to the Hartford Times in which he discusses the importance of impressing the Democratic creed upon the people this year, but he does not tell what the creed is; and almost simultaneously with Mr. Cleveland's deliverance Senator Tillman, who is another kind of a Democrat, in a colloquy in the Senate March 16, denied that Mr. Cleveland is a Democrat at all and called him something worse.

For further contemporary authority I refer you to the recent attempt of Mr. Murphy of Tammany Hall to read the Hon. Bourke Cockran out of Tammany Hall and the Democratic party, although Mr. Cockran, who is still another kind of a Democrat, says he has "written all the definitions of Democracy accepted and approved by Mr. Murphy during the last four years." But evidently Mr. Cockran was unable to keep pace with the moving picture.

GATES CONTEST SUIT

Before United States Land Office at Redding, Calif.

A Stone Land Filing By H. V. Cates, Which Controls One of the Greatest Power Projects on the Coast, Involved --California Power Company, Protestant

H. V. Gates arrived last evening and will remain several days making an inspection of the Light and Water plant. Mr. Gates came here from Redding, California, where he has been defending a contest suit before the United States Land Office. On January 2, 1907, Mr. Gates located one hundred and forty acres of stone land as the Excelsior placer mine, and a contest has been filed against the issuance of a patent by the Northern California Power Company, of Redding.

The result of the contest is vital to what is perhaps the greatest power project ever undertaken in the state of California, involving digging a tunnel six or seven miles long in the Big Bend of the Pitt and developing 250,000 horsepower on that stream. Made Railroad Survey.

H. V. Gates, who seeks a patent on the Excelsior placer, was once chief engineer for the Union Pacific. He made a survey in 1889 for that company of a railroad from Boise City, Idaho, down the Pitt River and thence to San Francisco. He knows every inch of the ground.

In January, 1907, he made a mineral entry in section 22, township 36 north, range 1 east, claiming 140 acres for building stone. The law allows building stone to be located as a placer.

This stone claim is the proposed location of a tunnel site, the tunnel being for the purpose of diverting water of Pitt river under the north flank of Hatchel Creek Mountain, across what is called the "big bend" of the Pitt. The tunnel is to be big enough to convey water enough to develop 250,000 horsepower of electrical energy at the downstream outlet. Actual construction work has been begun on this tunnel, though the labor so far performed has been in the nature of holding work. Real construction work on a large scale will not be undertaken until the present contest is disposed of, and all titles are cleared up.

Attacks Gates' Location.

The Northern California Power

Company filed a protest against the issuance of a patent to Gates, claiming that it had interests that would be impaired. The Northern California attacks the validity of the location of the Excelsior on the ground that while the placer claim was ostensibly filed upon for the building stone it contained, the real purpose was to locate a dam site, a reservoir site and a tunnel site.

The General Land Office thereupon directed that the protestant, the Northern California Power Company, be given a hearing in the Redding Land Office, in order that the real character of the stone-placer might be determined. The hearing began yesterday morning.

A table in Receiver Leininger's office is piled high with specimens of stone taken from Excelsior ground. These are all labeled. A dozen geologists have been summoned to give expert testimony as to the merits of the stone for building purposes.

Government Investigates.

The Government has made an independent investigation on its own part, sending out special agents from the Land Department, who, together with special agents from the Forest Service, have carefully examined every square foot of the 140 acres in the Excelsior placer mine. The "mine" is in the Shasta National Forest. At the close of the hearing Receiver Leininger will make his decision, subject to review in the General Land Office, and later before the Secretary of the Interior. The hearing, because of the great results depending upon the final decision, is the most important that has ever come before the United States Land Office in Redding.
