KLAMATH FALLS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1908.

NOTHING DIES—WHY SHOULD MAN?

It is an undeniable fact that nothing in this world is destroyed, says Pia Foa, the eminent scientist, in the November Deaneator. Then why man? Nothing dies, in the ordinary sense which we give to the word "death." Everything lives a life eternal! Everything evolves, passing from one form to another indefinitely. Objects as well as beings are subject to this law. Everything that exists in the universe, matter, animals and individuals, are but manifestations of the universal cosmic energy which is never lost. One can affirm that man, forming as he does a part of the universal energy, has in himself something of the immortal.

I have been present at a number of spiritualistic seances, those of Eusapia Paladino among others. These were carried out under conditions which precluded possibility of trickery. I have assisted at the raising of a heavy table from the floor. I have seen it completely demolished, while pieces of it went flying about the room in the air.

I have witnessed a struggle between an invisible hand and an experimenter for possession of a photographic plate. And, as these phenomena were produced under conditions where fraud was absolutely impossible, I have not the shadow of a doubt as to their authenticity. One cannot deny that they are astonishing, and, at the present state of scientific development, inexplicable.

We do not any more deny the emanations of radium, nor the existence of the waves of electricity which traverse the mountains with prodigious velocity. Why, then, may not an organism be gifted with the power to send off an energy which exists probably in us all, and which belongs to the cosmic phenomena as yet unexplored? The science of physical phenomena is progressing. It is being transformed, little by little, under the influence of the scientific development of our times.

For the moment we know but little, and we are ignorant of much.

When economy rides away in a carriage, poverty arrives on the rubbish wagon.

Some women can keep a secret. It took three political campaigns and part of a fourth to develop the fact that Mrs. Bryan had been expelled from school while a student at the Jacksonville (Ill.) Presbyterian academy because she went buggy riding with her present husband.

It has recently been decided in an English court that a wife's clothes belong to her husband. Now, if married English women desire to elope they must either go unclothed or run the risk of being prosecuted for larceny. The system does not seem to be without advantage after all.

The automobile has partially supplanted the horse. But Cleveland manufacturers have found a means of re-establishing the animal close to man's bosom. It's the sausage method. None of the horses we've interviewed seemed very much cut up about it, though.

C. T. Bryan, live stock commissioner, is preparing a formal quarantine proclamation against tuberculosis cattle from the north and east. Texas, which is almost entirely free from bovine tuberculosis, will probably be the only state exempted from the order. The present plan is to require all cattle entering Oklahoma to be accompanied by a certificate from a live stock inspector of the state from which they come, stating that the tuberculin test has been applied and the cattle found to be free from tuberculosis.

Twenty-four years is a long time for a ship to be away from its home port, but that is the record of a whaling bark that has just docked in New Bedford. The vessel left New Bedford in 1884 for a voyage around Cape Horn and since has been engaged in whaling in northern latitudes. The ship brings news that the whaling ships in the Atlantic are generally making heavy catches this season. The whaling business seems to have experienced a revival, and with this New Bedford is developing new importance which presents some likeness to its old-time activities as a whaling port.

"This is a fine country, Bridget," exclaimed Norah, who had but recently arrived in the United States. "Sure it's generous everybody is. I asked at the postoffice about sending money to me mither, and the young man tells me I can get a money order for ten dollars for ten cents! Think of that now!"

After punching his body full of holes as the result of sticking pins, needles and other sharp instruments into his skin for a number of years, meanwhile occasionally varying the performance by cutting nails, glass, tacks and taking poison, a Kansas City "human pin cushion" has given up the ghost. It takes a lot to kill some men.

Ethel Barrymore, actress, declares "that the most useless, brainless, selfish and purposeless order of beings in the world constitute the society of this country." If Miss Barrymore doesn't exercise more caution she will have some other claim to fame than being "just the sweetest, dearest girl" who ever walked across the stage.

It is not without satisfaction that we read of the adoption by the American food manufacturers of a resolution condemning as dangerous the use of preservatives in food. The education of the manufacturers has been so rapid as to be fairly startling. The pure food law has not been a law long enough to have been perfected, yet some of the men who voted for the resolution passed by the convention the other day were lined up in opposition to the pure food bill when it was pending in congress. The announcement that several of the principal concerns engaged in the preparation of food products would hereafter use no preservatives in their establishments. The pure food law does not prevent the use of harmful chemicals in the manufacture of the foods, but it does require that if such chemicals are used the label shall announce the fact. That the manufacturers are showing a disposition to improve on the law is a very hopeful sign.

Loss of friends is the price of suspicion.

A Democratic newspaper published in a Mississippi valley state devotes a column to proving that there are no disgruntled Democrats in one of the counties of the state where the party is especially strong. All it announces, are for the Democratic gubernatorial nominee. Yet the people go on wasting money in holding elections to establish facts that the partisan press proves forty times every week of the campaign. It is apparent that the public's duty is either to abolish the elections or the party organs.

To a diligent man nothing is the greatest task in the world. Life is burdensome only to those who find no joy in hard work.
