KLAMATH IRRIGATION
PROJECT.
By W. H. Heileman,
U. S. Reclamation Service.

The Klamath Project has sufficiently progressed in the building of its irrigation system to invite settlement in a large way. The lands of this project were largely in private ownership before the time the Reclamation Service began its comprehensive scheme of irrigation development.
Previous to the entrance of the government into this field, two small private irrigation districts existed on the project and the nucleus for farm settlement and town building was already established. Upon the advent of the Reclamation Service, adjustment was made of existing water rights in the district, and land in private ownership was subscribed to the project, in accordance with the terms of the Reclamation Act. At the present time there is but little land in the project open to homestead entry, and establishing a home generally entails the purchase of land from the present owner. The purchase of land in private ownership under a government project may be considered by many settlers as having material advantage over homestead entries on public land, as, for instance, the more rapid acquisition of title, though the water right obligations are the same in both cases. A person purchasing land from a private owner at once establishes sufficient title to obtain some credit at the local stores.
Such a condition is not possible in homesteading.
Climate.
The climate of the Klamath Basin is semi-arid and in the main favorable. The rainfall occurs largely in the winter months and averages about fourteen inches annually. Snow falls in winter, though no extreme periods of cold weather occur. The thermometer has registered at zero but few times in the past fifteen years.
The summers are generally pleasant, with uniformly cool nights. The close proximity of the basin to surrounding highlands causes occasional late frosts in the spring and sometimes rather early fall frosts.
The project is especially free from severe storms. Cyclones are unknown, and high winds, so commonly present in arid districts, are never in evidence.
The Southern Pacific Company is constructing a new line on the Shasta Route from Weed, California, directly to Klamath Falls. This line is finished to the town of Calor and stages connect from this point over good roads with the Klamath Lake landing. From the landing a steamer makes daily runs to Klamath Falls.
The railroad is continuing to build from Calor and during 1908 will be completed to within ten miles of the project lands.
It is generally understood that this new branch will be extended north from Klamath Falls and become ultimately the main line between San Francisco and Portland. Klamath Falls will be about midway between San Francisco and Portland, the distance to each port being about 350 miles from the Klamath Basin.
