

SUMMONS.

Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, in and for Klamath County.

Edward F. Boggs, Plaintiff, vs. Edward F. Boggs, Defendant. Summons.

To Edward F. Boggs, Defendant: You are hereby required to answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled suit on or before the 10th day of November, 1908, being the last day prescribed in the order for the publication of this summons, the first publication of which being on Friday, the 2nd day of October, 1908, and if you fail to answer, for want thereof, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint filed herein, to-wit: That a decree be entered herein in favor of plaintiff and against defendant, dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, and for such other relief as may be met to equity.

This summons is served by publication in the Evening Herald, a daily newspaper of general circulation, published in Klamath County, State of Oregon, by order of the Hon. George Noland, Judge of the Circuit Court for the first Judicial District of said State, under date of October 2, 1908, which order requires summons to be published for six successive weeks, commencing on the 2nd day of October, 1908, and ending on the 16th day of November, 1908.

PIERCE EVANS, Attorney for Plaintiff.

HUSBANDS.

Husbands are the natural product of most civilized countries. They are plentiful in most of the United States of America, being scarcest in Utah and Massachusetts, where each lady owns but a fraction of a husband, or none at all. Those owning more than a husband interest in a husband are called old maids.

Although the best husband in this country are acknowledged to be expert to be indigent to the soil, those commanding the highest market prices are the imported varieties, because of their expensive labels. The Crown brand brings the largest figure.

The husband is a wary and elusive animal, fleeing to safety at the first noise like a skit to his lair in clubs, offices and other remote caverns of his habitat, but he may be captured forth by an appearance of indifference on the part of the trapper, or his curiosity can always be accused to the change creature who could remain immune to his charms, after which he may be easily caught in broad daylight (though a white night light or moon calcium is preferable), in a trap composed of treachery, falcons, golden locks and factories.

There is a tradition to the effect that the earliest husband-catcher was a clumsy contrivance made of the hand-sewing attached to a spinning wheel, decorated with home-made preserves put up in strips of sweet disposition and sealed in common sense jars.

Once secured with a matrimonial halter tied in a diamond hitch, the husband usually becomes quite tame and will eat from the hand and sigh checks at will. There are more than fifty-seven varieties of husbands at large and in captivity, but they are broadly classed as good and bad, to their respective owners or keepers called wives. Since the wife is so constituted that she can believe anything she sets her mind to, she can easily persuade herself that a bad husband is a good one and vice versa—a merciful provision of Providence for marital happiness.

The American husband is called by his trans-Atlantic compere a beast of burden, to which he may justly retort that the trans-Atlantic husband is a beast of prey, or otherwise, but always the beast, and that it's a White Man's Burden, anyway. All of which proves that the highest grade husband extant has his permanent habitat in these United States of America.

NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.

Philadelphia has a school teacher who is 85 years old. He has been an instructor for 65 years and in that time assisted one hundred and twenty young people in their places in the world.

He has taught three generations of his grand-children of members of his earlier classes under his supervision. This instructor's name is Zephaniah Hopper, and he is the oldest teacher in the employ of the Philadelphia board of education. He began teaching in a grammar school when he was 19 years old and in his second year was made principal. He was subsequently principal of another school and is now the head of the mathematics department in the Central high school. One might imagine that after teaching for 65 years an instructor would be likely to "fall into a rut," as the expression is. Not so with Prof. Hopper. He is as active mentally and physically as his name would indicate. He has no "old foggy" notions and he does not believe that the days of his boyhood or of his early teaching experience were better days than those of the present. He has kept well abreast of the times and his fellow instructors unite in giving him full credit for being essentially modern. He has only one hobby: The clockwork system of life. He believes in training boys and girls to be methodical, punctual and orderly. Long experience has taught him, he says, that the most to be accomplished by following a well-planned system in public schools. He is not an advocate of the use of the rod in public schools. He believes that physical chastisement is not the best means of arousing a child's better nature. It tends rather, in his opinion, to make pupils sulky and resentful. "We used the rod in the public schools until 1879," he explained, "and though I had never resorted frequently to it, others did, and I was glad when the practice was abolished." Prof. Hopper credits his present good health to much walking. He is as spry now as any of his pupils and can outwalk most of them.

That detectives are not always as necessary as some royal personages imagine is well illustrated by a recent experience of King George of Greece on the occasion of his recent visit to France. The French government feared an attack by anarchists and never permitted the king to go out without being accompanied, at a respectful distance, by a guard. One day King George went into the country and was walking about apparently unattended. He was recognized by a peasant, doubtless from pictures that the man had seen in the French journals. The peasant also saw the French guard, who was following the king. He watched the two men closely for a time and then, approaching the king, whispered: "I beg your majesty's pardon, but an anarchist is following you." As he spoke he pointed toward the now fast approaching plain-clothes agent. "But," he added, "don't worry; I'll keep my eye on him."

A quip which has made many a bachelor smile. Most of our dollars are made of slippery feet.

MILLS ADDITION LOTS are Advancing in Value

When blocks in Mills Addition were offered at bargain prices a number of shrewd investors bought; since that time values have increased materially.

These Lots are Bargain Buys at present prices, and there is every reason to anticipate an advance in prices. Remember these lots are FIFTY feet in width and ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY FEET deep—more than double the area of most town lots offered to investors.
