GIFTS TO BE MADE BY THE GIRL WHO CANNOT SEW.

The girl who cannot cook, or sew, or embroider, I'm sorry for. But her case isn't hopeless, by any means. Perhaps you know some one who is a chaffing-dish devotee. If you do, save up all the good chaffing-dish recipes you can find, write them out plainly, or have them typewritten on heavy white paper, leaving some blank pages for later additions; then bind them together with a serviceable cover of rough gray or brown paper, which may be bought at any stationer's.

If you know of a shop where beads are sold you may make some fascinating strings of beads. One beautiful string I once saw was made of round green beads, of good size, strung with oblong black beads, which were roughly banded with iridescent gold and peacock colors. The string was about sixteen inches long, and the clasp was gold plated and cost nine-tenths of a cent.

If you are left enough with your fingers to paste-partout pictures neatly you have a wonderful opportunity, for the magazines are full of splendid reproductions, both in black and white and in color, well worth preserving some of the art magazines have especially good things. In some of the Japanese shops one can get prints for ten cents each, and though many of them are very crude and ugly, you will occasionally find a delicate "Fujiyama" or a clever illustration of some Japanese fairy tale that is worth keeping, and looks surprisingly well under glass with the passe-partout finish.—December Bellineator

The increased use of electricity on the Pennsylvania Railroad has led to a study of the dangers of handling live wires, and the methods that must be employed in resuscitating those who have been stunned by an electric shock. A special pair of pliers has been designed, which enables a man to cut a live wire carrying 22,000 volts without danger to himself. To remove the wire from a body when no other means are at hand, a coat is placed under the wire, and lifted by the sleeves, to raise the wire off the body. This was found perfectly safe, even when the garment was damp. Experiments with live streams showed that there was no danger of the current flowing down the stream of water even from a high-voltage line when the operator held the nozzle at a distance of between three and four feet from the wire. Experiments with chemical extinguishers showed that they were very dangerous where a solid stream was played on the wire.

The easiest way to insure being believed is to tell pleasant truths.

The latest commandment is: Thou shalt not, three-civet the presidency.

A man's best treasures are his friends, as Constantine truly says, and he might have added that perhaps this accounts for much of the poverty in the world.

Our business life is to make the world an easier place for others, but there are a great many of us who go bankrupt before we accomplish this. The best means of retaining cheerfulness is by giving it away.

There is joy in striving, but accomplishment robs us of incentive. Through some oversight there are not mansions enough to go around, but there is a sky for everyone.

Hatred is the key to the back door of the infernal regions.

There ought to be enough for everybody these hard times. Even the plow has its share.

The hot argument box should always be kept in a cool place.

The temperate in eating are seldom forced to ride nightmares.

—THE— KLAMATH IRRIGATION PROJECT.

By W. H. Heileman,
U. S. Reclamation Service.

The Klamath Project has sufficiently progressed in the building of its irrigation system to invite settlement in a large way. The lands of this project were largely in private ownership before the time the Reclamation Service began its comprehensive scheme of irrigation development. Previous to the entrance of the government into this field, two small private irrigation districts existed on the project and the nucleus for farm settlement and town building was already established. Upon the advent of the Reclamation Service, adjustment was made of existing water rights in the district, and land in private ownership was subscribed to the project, in accordance with the terms of the Reclamation Act. At the present time there is but little land in the project open to homestead entry, and establishing a home generally entails the purchase of land from the present owner. The purchase of land in private ownership under a government project may be considered by many settlers as having material advantage over homestead entries on public land, as, for instance, the more rapid acquisition of title, though the water right obligations are the same in both cases. A person purchasing land from a private owner at once establishes sufficient title to obtain some credit at the local stores. Such a condition is not possible in homesteading.

Klamath Falls is at present the principal town in the basin, and is the county seat of Klamath County. It is a town of 2509 inhabitants, has a number of substantial homes, and is well located, having on one side the Link River with its water-power possibilities, and a lake frontage on both Ewauna and Upper Klamath lakes. Numerous additions have been platted to the older portion of the town. Several hot springs issue in or near the town limits, and an adequate water supply for municipal and domestic use is derived from pure cold springs located within the city limits.

The town is supplied with electric lights, a fire protection department, and telephone systems. For irrigation uses a government canal occupies one of the higher terraces of the town and furnishes adequate water supply for lawns and gardens. The town is in greater part naturally drained, being built in fact, on a series of slopes which reach down to its lake and river frontages.

Klamath Falls has excellent common schools and churches. The primary school of the town is a new native sand-stone building, completed in 1906 at a cost of over $25,000. The County High School building is built of brick and native stone. It was completed in 1905 at a cost of about $40,000, and is large enough for a number of years in the future.

Several churches are represented, among them being the Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Catholic and Christian Science. All of these except the Christian Science own buildings.

When blocks in Mills Addition were offered at bargain prices a number of shrewd investors bought; since that time values have increased materially.

These Lots are Bargain Buys at present prices, and there is every reason to anticipate an advance in prices. Remember these lots are FIFTY feet in width and ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY FEET deep—more than double the area of most town lots offered to investors.
