KLAMATH FALLS, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1909.

GARFIELD WILL PROBABLY BE THE NEXT SECRETARY.

As far as can be learned, President-elect Taft has not finally decided upon his Secretary of the Interior, but indications strongly point to the selection of James R. Garfield, now holding that office. Secretary Garfield is anxious to remain in his present position; Mr. Taft knows of this desire; he is also aware that Mr. Garfield gave him staunch support in the campaign, and prior to the Chicago convention, and furthermore he appreciates the seriousness with which Mr. Garfield has taken hold of the work of his department.

There was a time when it was believed ex-Land Commissioner R. A. Ballinger, of Seattle, might be chosen for Secretary of the Interior, but Mr. Ballinger has said he does not want the office, and it is well known by his friends that he does not care for official life in Washington. Therefore, it is reasonably certain that he will not be a member of the next Cabinet. With Ballinger out of the way there is no man looming up on the horizon who is regarded as a strong competitor of Garfield, and the probabilities are that the young Ohioan will remain at the head of the Interior Department for another four years.

The main objection raised by Western men to Secretary Garfield is the fact that he is an Easterner, not personally familiar with Western conditions and Western needs. However, since he became Secretary of the Interior Mr. Garfield has spent much of his time in the West, getting in intimate touch with Western people, and his sympathies are decidedly with the deserving classes whose needs he has discovered. In this respect he is today much more sympathetic than any previous Secretary of the Interior in 10 or 15 years, and he knows more of actual Western conditions than any other Eastern man who ever filled that Cabinet office.

Those in a position to appreciate what Secretary Garfield has accomplished since he took hold of a department disrupted by Secretary Hitchcock do not hesitate to commend the present Secretary for his accomplishments, and those who know how hard he has struggled to get in touch with the people of the entire West commend him for his success in that direction.
