Reports from the outside are so favorable for a large attendance at the Railroad Day celebration that the directors of the Chamber of Commerce deemed it necessary to have two large coffee pots to supply the demand. The pots are of monstrous size—almost large enough for W. H. Dolbeer, the manager of the barbecue, to go swimming in one of them. It is likely that the Chamber of Commerce will use the pots to run an opposition sanatorium to F. T. Sanderson after the grand celebration.

GARDEN NOTES.

[From June Farm Journal.]
The asparagus beetle is a troublesome pest, not easy to control, says Rural New Yorker. Chickens are fond of them and will rid garden beds of the adults, but, of course, can be of little benefit in large fields. Clean cutting, especially in ridge culture, keeps them well under control in spring, but the slugs or larvae do considerable harm later.

Don't forget to keep picking the cucumbers as they ripen. Look through the vines carefully (they have a great way of hiding in the leaves) so that none will be overlooked; for two or three large ones going to seed will sap all the strength of their vine. Whereas in picking them right along new ones will form and a continued supply be secured.

The Bordeaux mixture is the proper remedy to use for all fungous troubles, viz., mildew and rust of beans, potato and tomato rot and leaf-blight; melon and cucumber diseases; celery leaf-blight and rust, etc. The half-strength mixture (two pounds copper sulphate, two pounds quicklime, fifty gallons water) is strong enough to use in the vegetable garden, except for potatoes.

Look out for the striped beetle. They often attack and destroy melons and cucumbers as fast as the plants appear above the ground. An application of wood ashes, air-slaked lime or gypsum, tincture with kerosene or turpentine or carbolic acid, will help to drive them away. If you have only a few plants you can easily protect each hill by erecting a mosquito netting guard over it until the plants begin to run.

There are three common methods of growing strawberries—in hills, in narrow matted rows, or in wide matted rows. We prefer the second method. Arrange the first strong runners by hand, spacing them properly and securing each one in place with a little soil or a small stone. Then, when each row is full, cut off all additional runners that may grow. Keep the ground hoed and cultivated until late fall. The finished row should not be wider than fifteen or eighteen inches.
