QUEENSBORO BRIDGE.

The Greatest Structure of Its Kind in the World.

Measured by the combined length and capacity of its five main spans, the Queensboro bridge, across the East river from Fifty-ninth street, New York, to Ravenswood, Queens, is the greatest bridge in the world. Including approaches, its total length is 8,000 feet, width 80 feet and greatest height over 300 feet above the water. It crosses from shore to shore, 135 feet above the river, with three enormous spans of 1,182 feet, 630 feet and 984 feet, the middle one reaching across the full width of Blackwell's island. Besides these there are two more great "anchor" spans, one at each end, wholly over dry land, with a length of 872 feet for the five, which together contain over 105,000,000 pounds of steel. No other spans in this country, except suspension bridges, approach the longest of these, and the only trussed span in the world which exceeds it is the Forth bridge, which, although 1,710 feet long, has a capacity for only two railroad tracks, less than one-third of this. There are two decks, the lower carrying a wide driveway and four electric car tracks and the upper one two sidewalks and two elevated railroad tracks and having in all an estimated capacity of 300,000,000 car passengers and millions of vehicles and pedestrians annually. It cost over $20,000,000.—Exchange.

RULE OF THE SEA.

Old Whaling Law Applied to a Twice Caught Cod.

That etiquette is observed among the fishermen that journey to the fishing banks was discovered by an amateur angler on his first trip.

The amateur hooked a codfish, but his line parted just as the fish was above the water. Back fell the codfish, carrying with him two sinkers and the hook.

Twenty minutes later another angler cried out that he had captured a cod with two sinkers and a hook. The amateur went up to the angler, who appeared to be an old salt, and asked for his hook and sinkers, which had his name stamped on them. He was surprised when the old salt told him to take the fish also.

According to the rules generally followed on the fishing boats, the second angler was entitled to the fish, but the hook and sinkers should be returned to their owner. The old angler explained why he wanted to give up the fish.

It seems that he had followed the sea a great part of his life. When a young man he was a whaler, and, according to whaling law, a dead whale belongs to the ship whose name appears on the harpoon that killed it. Therefore the old salt figured that the amateur owned the codfish he had taken.—New York Sun.

Euler's Wonderful Memory.

Leonhard Euler, who was born in 1707 and died in 1783 at St. Petersburg, where he spent his life as a teacher of great power and as a prolific writer, was an instance of the genuine mathematician endowed with almost superhuman powers. He left more than 200 manuscript treatises on his favorite subject, and the bulk of the works published by his academy between 1727 and 1783 were from his pen. In his old age he was totally blind. Then he carried in his memory a table of the first six powers of the "series of natural numbers up to 100."

It is related that on one occasion two of Euler's students attempted to calculate a converging series. As they advanced they found they disagreed by the result by a unit in the fifteenth figure. The question was referred to Euler, who decided to make the calculation. He did this mentally, and his result was found to be correct.—New York Tribune.

The Codmoppe.

Herrings are still eaten as much as in the days when Yarmouth had to send a hundred yearly to the king, baked in four and twenty pasties. But where is the codmoppe gone, and what was it like when kings dined off it in Lent? "Codmoppe" was a Hollandish name for a codmoppe, a codmoppe, a codmoppe. More original still would be the "roasted porpoise" of a Henry V. banquet, which was the "porpoise" of the medieval ecclesiastical. A master cook gives an early receipt for "pudding of porpoise," another teaches how to "make porpoise and melle," another how to "understrawbe that porpoise." From which it may be seen that enterprise extended also to the spelling of the porpoise.—London Chronicle.

Candy-makers' Trick.

An Atchison man went into a candy factory. He was surprised to see one of the candy-makers reach with his bare hand into a pot of boiling candy. He brought out a handful of the boiling stuff. He was testing its consistency. He first put his hand in a pail of water. After he had jerked out his hand he put it back in the water. The Atchison man tried the same thing and did it without getting burned.—Atchison Globe.

Another Spring Question.

"I say, pa, is a man from Poland called a Pole?"
"Yes, my son."
"Then, pa, why isn't a man from Holland called a Hole?"—Comic Cuts.

Insult Added.

Big Man (with a grudge)—Will you be so kind as to get off my foot? Little Man (with a bundle)—I'll try, sir. Is it much of a walk?—Cleveland Leader.

Maud in the Garden.

Some into the garden, dear. There is a sweet unrest.
Edna dreamed last night of violets, and now they're on his breast!
—Atlanta Constitution.

Aye, come into the garden while spring's got on her rig.
Indulge not in poetic gush, but get a spade and dig.
—Scranton Tribune.

Yes, come into the garden. Spring wears her greenest gown.
But when you plant the tender seeds don't get 'em upside down.
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Immediate Publicity.

"I'd like to get this information into all the papers today," says the public man, "but it is too late for them."
"Leave it to me," suggests the friend.
"I'll get my wife to telephone it to one of her acquaintances and pledge her to secrecy. That's quicker than having it printed."—Chicago Post.

Literary.

May says that she reads a great many books.
As knowledge she needs.
May says that she reads, but the little witch feeds upon novels—the cook's!
May says that she reads a great many books.
—New York Times.

An Old Saying.

"A penny for your thoughts," said the postman.
"What do you mean?" inquired the poet.
"There's a cent due on this returned manuscript."—Kansas City Journal.

An Old Truth.

Stiggs ran away with Stiggs' wife. Left no address behind.
But very soon Stiggs advised Stiggs and had a change of mind.
Stiggs advertised. Stiggs sent her back. Stiggs the moral line:
Stiggs now believes—not so with Stiggs—it pays to advertise.
—Boston Herald.

Caustic.

"I have adopted a new motto for my life," sighed the man who resided with his mother-in-law.
"What is it?" they inquired.
"Everything is relative."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Fruits of a Rival.

"I wouldn't give a fig for you!" said the maiden at the gate.
And the young man found her words were true—
She had another date.
—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Singular Effect.

"Hain't that umpire got a peach of a voice?"
"Yes; a ball once hit him on his Adam's apple, and it has never been the same since."—Town Topics.

A Withering Glimpse.

I once had a doggie named Spark.
Who met with an auto at dark.
It gave him a glance
That pressed out his pants
And tore off a part of his bark.
—Judge's Library.

What He Married For.

"They tell me you are married," they said to the poet. "How did that happen? Did you marry for money?"
"No," said he, "for better or worse."
—New York Press.

Look Out and Up.

If your enemy is an airship man
You'd best keep out of view,
For there's no denying
That when he's flying
He's got the drop on you.
—Boston Herald.

When It Happened.

Green Golfer—Why, did I knock it in the hole, caddy?
Caddy—Yes; that last stroke when yer shut yer eyes on account of the dust.—Puck.

Likes the Tamed Ones.

This talk of woman's rights she scorns.
It's nonsense, she avers.
But she goes in for woman's lefts.
What are these? Why, widowers!
—Boston Transcript.

Different.

"You have a talking acquaintance with Mrs. Gableton, haven't you?"
"Well, no. I have a listening acquaintance."
—Cleveland Leader.

The Summer Girl.

Now soon the lovely summer maid
Will once again be seen
Departing for the rural shade
To gabble on the green.
—Kansas City Times.

After the Auto Accident.

Algie Soffie—And is my skull fractured, doctor?
Dr. Perry—No, not fractured—dentist.—Lippincott's Magazine.

The Attraction.

They wondered how he could bewitch
One beautiful and young
Until they heard that he was rich
And only had one lung.
—New York Telegram.

Amateur Gardening.

"Have you harvested your vegetable plot, Jones?"
"No, but I have my feelings."—Baltimore American.

The Trouble.

Upon life's matrimonial sea
So many gayly float,
And all goes on right merrily
Till some one rocks the boat.
—Detroit Free Press.

Not Suitable.

She—Try this delightful cough candy.
He (coughing)—It wouldn't do me any good. I haven't a delightful cough.
—Chicago News.

By a Victim.

You may talk about women
Of brains and all that,
But the smaller the brain
The bigger the hat.
—Yonkers Statesman.

Under Consideration.

"And is she engaged to the count?"
"Only tentatively. Nothing but an option has been paid yet."—Philadelphia Ledger.
