"SECRETARY OF GOLF"

Senator Bourne in the Limelight as the Constant Companion of President Taft.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—A good story leaks out from the White House relating to the appointment by President Taft of Senator Bourne "secretary of golf." Ever since Senator Bourne played golf with Mr. Taft, then president-elect, at Virginia Hot Springs, he has been recognized as the constant companion of the big man on the links. He was summoned by Mr. Taft to Augusta, Ga., later, after he had gone from Hot Springs, and there the two went around the grassy links, brassies, corks, lofters and other implements of the popular Scotch game in their hands.

Every day here when state duties do not prevent or the president takes one of his occasional horseback rides, Mr. Taft orders one of the White House automobiles, and boards it, with Senator Bourne, General Clarence Edwards and sometimes another as his companions. Always Bourne is with him; not always General Edwards.

The game ended, often with Bourne ahead of the president with a lower score, the big touring car is cranked up, the presidential party enters it, and the chauffeur cuts loose with all disregard of all speed laws, and the car comes whirling back to town along Connecticut avenue, which leads directly from the Chevy Chase club to the White House, a straightaway course of seven miles.

This constant association of President Taft and Senator Bourne has attracted wide attention, and so the other day a Washington newspaper man indulged in a joke with Mr. Taft about it.

"I have wondered," the scribe said, "how it comes that Senator Bourne, who was so devoted to the Roosevelt idea, and so persistently worked for his nomination and against yours, is so close a personal friend of yours."

"Why should not Mr. Bourne be one of my best friends?" the president answered. "Isn't he the exponent of the second elective term?"

The penman went away, and, after a moment's thought saw the point.

"Sure enough," he remarked to another writer. "Advocacy of a second elective term ought to please any president."

Senator Bourne.

The senator bears his presidential honors modestly. It brings him more or less into the glare of publicity, and sometimes the senator's friends think they detect evidence of embarrassment on that account. The other day, when Orville Wright made his sensational flight, lifting his aeroplane without the 1,500 pound weight heretofore used, the president motored over from Chevy Chase, and with him was Senator Bourne and others. Ten thousand people were there, senators, congressmen, cabinet members, Speaker Cannon, Vice-President Sherman and hosts of other prominent men and women.

Every eye was on the presidential automobile as it entered the Port Meyer reservation, and followed it as it made its way to the tent reserved for Mr. Taft and his friends. It was quite a trying ordeal, and the senator Oregon senator was called on to exist in public for the time within the "Berce light which beats upon a throne."

Speaker Cannon Fined It.

Finally Speaker Cannon took a seat to the left of the president, shook hands with him, and turned to look at the others who were in the tent.

"Have a cigar, Bourne," said the speaker; and the party was more at ease after that.

First of the Swifts.

Gustavus Franklin Swift, the first of this commercial dynasty, was a Cape Cod Yankee, who bought a steer now and then and peddled the meat from the back of a certain gocart which has since become famous. He moved to Albany and went deeper into meats, discarding one after another partners who had not the foresight and daring which he possessed. He located in Chicago at the beginning of those days of great possibilities in bringing into touch the new west and the older east. It was he who invented the first refrigerator cars. This was the one revolutionary act which put his sons and a few other sons in very fair control of half of the meat of America. He saw the market for dressed beef extended only after the hardest of fights. All great revolutions are fought against. All the rest, all England, all Europe, fought the idea of dressed beef and then accepted it. I doubt if we could do without it now.—Cosmopolitan Magazine.

A Voice From the "Gods."

Is a certain theater which makes a specialty of melodrama there is a large following of gallery "gods," and very naturally the "sky" assemblage is composed of knowing critics, who are loud in their demands to be pleased. Was unto the actor who is unfortunate enough to incur their displeasure?

Recently a play with a hair raising plot was put on the boards. The hero was evidently new to his part, for he fumbled his lines badly and spoke in a faltering tone. Perhaps it was for this reason that he did not meet with the sympathy of the gallery.

Just before the crisis of the play the hero clasped his sweetheart in his arms and said:

"Keep a brave heart, my darling. The worst is yet to come."

Whereupon a voice that had no doubt received its training in crying "Entry" on the street yelled out:

"What are y' gods' t' do, mister—sing!"—London Tit-Bits.

There Was Something Doing.

In a barber's shop the other day I saw a man for whom I felt sorry—not that he needed my sympathy from the standpoint of charity, for he was a well to do man, having many business affairs, but I felt sorry for him because of what he was doing. A barber was cutting his hair. He was having his left hand manicured. In his right hand he held a newspaper. He was smoking a cigar, and a porter was shining his shoes. There he sat reading a newspaper. Three persons were busy waiting on him, doing their best to please him, and he was oblivious to the joy which his opportunity afforded him.—Fort Worth Star.

All Unreciprocated.

A titled Englishman was speaking of the impoverished nobility of the old world.

"What a German friend of mine said of his family is true of too many families. My friend was a graf, I was visiting his castle on the Rhine. He showed me there one day many proofs of his race's antiquity.

"Dear me," said I, stifling a yawn. "I had no idea you went back so far."

"He pointed proudly to an old steel bound chest of black oak.

"Why, my boy," said he, "I've got bills in there dating back to the twelfth century."

Football as Played in Labrador.

One must not imagine it is all work and no play with the Labrador Eskimos. Much to my surprise, I found that our good old game of football had taken hold in Ungava. The game is played with the ball of sealskin stuffed with grass. The goals are placed much the same as in our own game, and each player is armed with a short handed sling made of several thoughts of seal hide bent in loops and attached to a wooden handle. The ball may either be tossed in the sling, kicked or should opportunity offer, picked up and carried. Rough tactics are not barred. I have seen a man tossed in the air and pitched head foremost into a snow bank, while pushing, tripping and kicking are all freely indulged in.—Recreation.

The Clarinet.

The clarinet has the richest, sweetest voice of all the wood wind instruments, although its sound does not travel quite so far as that of the oboe. Whenever, as sometimes happens, there are two melodies to be played at once, the clarinet takes the lower of the two, while the violin plays the upper and more important one. But in a military band, where there are no strings at all, the clarinet plays the chief melody. The bass clarinet is not so smooth or so sweet as the higher one. It has a rather choky sound, though softer than that of the bassoon.—St. Nicholas.

Reassuring Him.

"A little final advice," said a professor of elocution, addressing his pupils before the annual entertainment—"go well to the front of the stage, don't hesitate and don't be nervous!"

"But, I say, professor," remarked a very self satisfied member of the class, "suppose I forget part of my oration?"

"Oh, that doesn't matter," replied the professor. "On the contrary, the more of it you forget the better the audience will like it!"

ALLEGED EXPLOIT OF BURBANK

Pasadena Gardeners Call Him a Nature Faker, and Claim His Creations Are False.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., AUG. 9.—

It resolved, that the Pasadena Gardeners' association hereby strongly condemns the nature-faking methods and the exploitations of alleged but false creations by Luther Burbank, and deplores the fact that a false impression has been given the public concerning plant breeding by Burbank. It is the sense of this association that this impression should be corrected.

Criticism of Luther Burbank and his methods, which has been going on among Southern California horticulturists for many months, reached a climax last night, when the foregoing resolution was unanimously adopted at the close of a discussion of Burbank and Burbankism before a meeting of the Pasadena Gardeners' association, attended by upwards of 100 florists and gardeners. The meeting was held in the assembly room of the Pasadena board of trade, and was attended by members of the association and a large delegation from the Los Angeles florists' association, some of whom took part in the discussion.

The discussion occupied the entire evening, and the feature of it was a report made by a personal representative of the Southern California Florists' and Gardeners', who was recently sent to Santa Rosa to investigate Burbank and his claims. P. D. Barnhart, editor of the Pacific Gardener, of Los Angeles, and former curator of the botanical museum of the University of Southern California, was the man commissioned by the association to investigate Burbank.

Barnhart said he visited Burbank at Santa Rosa in July, and was handed a card which stated that Burbank's time was worth $10 an hour. Barnhart said Burbank informed him that he was a busier man than President Taft, and was doing more than all the government bureaus in the world to produce new fruits and flowers.

Frog Farming in France.

Among the advantages of frog farming in France is the fact that it enables persons of limited means to utilize the marshes and ponds which are too shallow and warm for fish culture and practically useless for any other purpose and produce on a comparatively small area a large amount of valuable food material for which there is always an eager market.

Hunted the Hunter.

"Is it really true," asked Miss Chelina, "that you're engaged to Mr. Richey?"

"It is," calmly replied Miss Bute.

"My," exclaimed Miss Chelina, "he was a great catch."

"I beg your pardon," retorted the other laughingly; "catcher."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Objects of General Interest.

"Those Sashy Van Punks have moved. Do you know where they went?"

"That's the very thing their unhappy landlord asked me."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
