Absentingled persons are not lafrequently met among the medical pro-fession, who of all men should al-ways have their with about them. It is related that a well known doctor was once present in a public place when an accident occurred and, seeing a wounded man, went about call-ing: "A dector! A dector! Somebody go and fetch a dector!" A friend who was by his side ven-tured to loguire, "Well, what about

Eccentric Count Bertrand.

Count Bertrand, who lived in Paris, was a very eccentric man, and to one of his eccentricities be ascribed his long life. Once a year be would betake himself to bed and stay there for take himself to bed and stay there for three months. On these occasions he would see no one but his servant, who brought him his meals, and even him he forbade to speak. Just before the Germans began the siege of Paris the count went to bed, and the servant, true to his injunctions, said nothing of the events going on around him. One day the bread proved so bad the count day the bread proved so bad the count demanded an explanation, whereby, of course, be learned that l'aris was encompassed by the enemy. Springing out of bed, the count paced the floor, repeating, "What should a Bertrand do under such circumstances?" Sud do under such circumstances?" Sud-denly he stopped, exclaiming, "We should go to bed!" and to bed he went and stayed there until the slege was
