BALLINGER PLEDGERS HELP

Indorse Principles of Conservation—
Congress Votes for Keeping
Water for the People.

A recent dispatch from Seattle gives the following interesting news: The National Conservation congress Saturday effected a permanent organization, adopted a radical water right resolution after a vigorous debate in which radical sentiment was expressed by a majority of the delegates, listened to addresses by Secretary of the Interior R. A. Ballinger, Francis J. Heney and Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot, and adjourned.

Learning that Mr. Ballinger would arrive from Eastern Washington, where he has been with the senate irrigation committee, on an afternoon train, the congress sent a committee to the station to meet him. Mr. Ballinger was escorted at once to the convention hall in the Pine Arts building at the exposition grounds. He was greeted by loud applause and he was at once introduced. He spoke but a few minutes, and his remarks were as follows:

Ballinger for Conservation.

"I feel some interest in this organization, as I assisted in drafting the articles of incorporation to put it into existence. I heartily endorse the principles for which it stands. I read with much interest the President's message to congress. What he said expresses my sentiments exactly. While I thus subscribe my endorsement of the principles of conservation I would much prefer that you judge me by my acts rather than by my words."

As soon as he finished speaking Mr. Ballinger left the hall. Francis J. Heney was then introduced. He made a short but vigorous address in which he attacked the water power trust and urged the congress to do all in its power to preserve the natural resources of the country.

Pinchot Attacks Power Trust.

Mr. Heney had no sooner finished than there were loud calls for Mr. Pinchot. Finally Mr. Pinchot, who was sitting in the back part of the hall, came forward. His appearance on the platform was the signal for a prolonged demonstration. Several times he raised his hands to strop the applause and the chairman pounded vigorously with his gavel, but with no effect. When the demonstration, which continued for several minutes, subsided Mr. Pinchot thanked the delegates for the expression and then took up the attack on the power trust begun by Mr. Heney. He said:

"Mr. Heney was right when he said we must save the water power sites for the benefit of the whole people. There is now being fought the great fight on the water power trust, and all have to keep up the fight until it is finally settled by congress at its next session. The fight will have to be made in the face of the most vigorous opposition that can possibly be imagined, for the men who seek to control these resources will spare no wealth and will use every legitimate means to bring about their ends. The fight cannot be put off. It must be decided soon. Either these powers will be grabbed by the men who seek to monopolize our water power and their possession legalized by congress, or they will be saved to the people and so legalized by congress. Seldom has a contest been so clearly defined. We are face to face with the issue, and must make a great fight this year."

Resolution on Water Rights.

Invitations for the next congress were received from Los Angeles and Kansas City. They were left in the hands of the executive committee. Following is the text of the water rights resolution adopted:

"We urge upon the states the enactment of comprehensive water laws framed in accordance with the policy pursued in several Western states during recent years, incorporating the principle that the waters belong to the people. We hold this right of the people is inherent and indefeasible. Recognizing the necessity of administering this invaluable possession for the people, we deny the right of state or federal governments to alienate or convey water by granting franchises for the use thereof for commercial power purposes in perpetuity or without just compensation in the interests of the people.

"We hold that all natural resources belong primarily to the whole people and should not be alienated by municipal, state or national grants or franchises to individuals or corporations except for limited periods."

Pardee and Hanford Lead Forces.

This resolution was adopted by a large majority after a spirited debate in which ex-Governor George C. Pardee of California was its chief supporter and United States Judge Cornelius H. Hanford its chief opponent.

Other resolutions adopted endorse the forestry and reclamation bureaus, recommending the creation of a national bureau of mines, endorse the national conservation commission and urge congress to make an appropriation to carry on the commission's work, and favor the admission of Arizona and New Mexico as states.
